FIGHTING A FIFTY-YEAR FIRE

Coal Mine Confiagration Defics Resources of Man.

CONTEST COSTS MILLION DOLLARS Remarkable and Putile Effort Against

a Blazing Underground Furnace that is Esting Its Way to the Surface. It was a cold, bright morning in February, just fifty-one years ago. Snow had fallen on the mountains the night before; the flakes had been tossed helter and skelter by a wind that grew older every me tent, so that by morning, after the storm had subsided, the surface ; and the fire would pass on, all the water had frozen into a glistening crust. When the sun peeped over the mountains to the east an early riser, looking from the door his little shanty-one of the few shanties which then accounted for the turbans; from Italy they came, sunburned $1,000,000. town of Summit Hill, Pa -- noticed to the westward something that held his gaze. As time passed the free became a matter almost of indifference to the people of the locality. Underground the furnace raged, red hot. Not more than a mile away, people went to their work in other mines, grew old with the passing of years; over on the hill they knew men were working to extinguish the fire, but they knew it blazed onward despite their efforts; they ceased to care. Burrowed Under Mountain. Remorselessly the fire ate under the mountain, a red-eyed dragon, burning; down at the mouth of the shaft, as the years passed, two men stood, grim yet patient sentinels, watching at the mouth of the red dragon's lair. Up on the hill, digging into the earth, men sank holes, into which they poured almost inexhaustible streams of water and "gob;" sometimes there would arise bursts of volcanic steam, bit believes will finally block the fire.

Polluter of Public In-

William Allen White tells a story in an article in the American Magazine for April that is calculated to make the readers of the story ponder. As it epitomixes so much of the good and most of the bad in municipal life, the story of these two men, about whom the parable is told, bears repesting: "During the early years of this century we men lived in a great city in the southwest epitomized so entirely much of the good and most of the bad in our municipal life that the story of these two men insofar as the story illustrates the parable of politics in the great cities of the land, should be set down here. One man was rich. He had family. His father was a personage in the state and in the nation forty years ago. The other man came up from the people. He was no one in particular. The rich man kept out of politics; he was in business and in society. He was a pillar of society. The poor man went into politics, perhaps with the idea that some day he might become a pillar of society. He went to the common council for the glory of it. To go he went and asked for the city boss to send him. A city boss always helps men who are I politics for the honor it brings. And after the poor man had been in the council for a time, he found-did this common councliman-that to get results, to get favors for his ward, he would have to tie up with the "combine." And the boss cinched up the girth of control on that common coun cilman two holes when the common couneilman joined the gang. Then when the boss fixed it so that a little money might distributed among the faithful, the comon councilman accepted the common practice and took his share. And the other man the pillar of society, the rich man, knew it Also he knew that much money was distributed among the councilmen by the boss and his friends. For part of the money came from funds which the rich man was guarding. He knew how franchises were ought for his client and friends were in heard a great orator tell of deeds upon the battlefield of Gettysburg, the councilmen rose while the band played the "Star-Spangled Banner," and said, as his eyes filled and his voice choked. "Ob. if I could only die for my country." And then the crash came. Arrests for bribing and accepting bribes were made. Whereupon the prosecuting attorney began to get anonymous letters, faultlessly typed, telling him what witnesses to summon, what questions to ask them and in general how to get at the truth. Every day came these letters, and the thieves in the city, big and little, were in consternation at the acumen of the district attorney. The district attorney never fathomed the mystery of his anonymous friend's identity. But he found that the information was invariably accurate. So the district attorney followed the blind lead and got results. He knew that some one was aspiring beyond his courage, that some one saw the sin of bribery, that some man apparently an educated man, obviously a man high in financial and social councils, was holding out a life line to Chicago Tribune

No case of contagious blood poison is ever cured until the last particle of the virus has been removed from the circulation. The least taint left in the blood will sooner or later, cause a fresh outbreak of the trouble, with all its hideous and destructive symptoms of ulcerated mouth and throat, copper colored splotches, falling hair, sores and ulcers, etc. No other medicine so surely cures contagious blood poison as S. S. S. It goes down into the blood and steadily and surely drives out every particle of the infection. It absolutely and perfectly purifies the blood, and leaves this vital fluid as fresh, rich and healthy as it was before the destructive virus of contagious blood poison entered the circulation. S. S. S. quickly takes effect on the blood, and gradually the symptoms disappear, the health is improved, the skin cleared of all spots, sores and other blemishes, the hair stops coming out, the mouth and throat heal and when S. S. S. has cleansed the system of the poison no trace of the disease is left. S. S. S. cures contagious blood poison because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers, tested and proven for more than forty years. Book on this disease with suggestions for home treatment, and any medical advice sent free to all who write.
