ment at the height of the gold fever. Every week miners were coming down by hundreds from their camps to see the great tragedian in "Othello." At every evening performance there would be several score of them in the best seats in the house. One evening a large fellow in a red shirt, rough coat and heavy boots took a seat on the aisle in front of Bret Harte. Around him he spread with every breath the aroma of forty-rod whisky. Moreover, at every curtain he went out to refresh himself, returning with a stronger aroma and increased interest in the play. At each climax the thrills seemed to permeate his whole body, so intense was his interest. However, nothing moved him out of the ordinary until the scene between Othello and lago in the matter of the handkerchief. It will be recalled by every reader of Shakespeare that in this scene Othello tries to argue himself out of his jealous rage regarding Desdemona, but that, at the critical point of his argument, Iago offers an objection to this effect: "Yes, my lord, but the handkerchief!" These references the incriminating handkerchief of Othello's wife had an electric effect on the red shirted miner. His uneasiness grew with each successive objection interposed by Iago until he apparently could endure it no longer, and, as lago, for the fifth or sixth time came back with his "Yes, my lord, but the handkerchief," the miner tended his right arm, and, pointing with excited emphasis at Iago, roared in tones that rolled into the uppermost gallery: "Wipe yer nose on yer sleeve, young man, and let the play go on!"-San Francisco Call.

REMOVES THE CAUSE

No remedy that does not entirely remove the cause of Catarrh from the blood will ever make a permanent cure of the trouble. Just as long as the circulation remains contaminated with the impurities and catarrhal matters which produce the trouble, the mucous membranes or inner linings of the body will be kept in a state of irritation and disease. Sprays, lotions and other local applications will sometimes temporarily relieve the tight, full feeling in the head, buzzing noises in the ears, uncomfortable, stuffy feeling of the nostrils, and help to loosen the mucus in the throat; but Catarrh is a constitutional blood disorder and until it has been entirely driven from the system there can be no permanent cure. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by removing the icause from the blood. It attacks the disease at its head and by thoroughly purifying and cleansing the circulation, and ridding it of every particle of impurity, and at the same time enriching the blood, allows the inflamed and irritated membranes to heal, improves the general health, and stops every disagreeable symptom. S. S. S. reaches down to the very bottom and leaves no trace of the disease in the system. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write.
