RUSSIAN EDITOR'S JUBILEE

Honor Done to Alexis Suvorin of the Novoe Vremya.

HUNDRED SOCIETIES JOIN IN

Fiftieth Anniversary of the Great St. Petersburg Publication Was Made a Notable Event by Admirers of Its Editor.

St. Petersburg, April 3.—In the Hall of Nobility in this city in the presence of 5,000 people, addresses from over 100 societies were presented on Friday, last, to Alexis Suvorin, proprietor-editor of the Novoe Vremya, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of his first article.

plays, dancing by the favorite artists of the imperial ballet, and orchestral music. He had his health propped by Mr. Khominikoff, president of the Imperial Duma; the terpsichorean goddesses Tobenskaya and Pavlova danced to him and in the name of foreign culture Lena Cavallieri sang him Neapolitan songs to a guitar accompaniment.

Literary-Artistic theater here, called usually the Suvorin theater, and he is an eager student of modern painting. Old Serger Suvorin, his father, was a serf of the crown. He was a military conscript for life, and was wounded in the battle of Borodino, where the Russians made their first great stand against Napoleon's advance on Moscow.
