KENNEDY GOES BACK TO FARM Has Had All He Wants of Seeing the

Sights. Dan Kennedy, the aged and wealthy farmer from Ulysses, Neb., who came to Council Bluffs to see the sights and succeeded in seeing a goodly share of them, was sent home yesterday. The police, who gathered him in for safe keeping Friday, gave him enough money of what he had left to pay his way home and sent the balance to his bank at Ulysses. As to the drafts for several thousand deliars which the old man was reported to have displayed during his peregrinations about the various resorts of the city, Kennedy when the police they were safe, but was not disposed to give out any more information concerning them.

Chief Richmond, however, took the pre caution to notify the bank at Ulysses and received word back that the bank officials would protect Kennedy and that the drafts would not be honored if presented for payment by any person other than the old man himself. It was said that Kennedy had between $6,000 and $7,000 on deplait in the Ulyases bank.

Kennedy in bidding the police goodbye and thanking them for taking care of him said he had come to Council Bluffs to get a little excitement after the humdrum life at the farm. "I guess I found what I was looking for," he said, "and I guess I have had enough for the present and had better go home. It was a trifle expensive, but I guess it was worth the money."

New Orleans Cases Ontlawed.

"I am of the opinion that United States Commissioner Crawford mistook what I wrote about Maybray and his gang in New Orleans," said Postoffice Inspector Swenson yesterday on his return to Council "While I submitted considerable evidence to the grand jury at New Orleans no indictments were found against any of the gang for the reason that the cases were outlawed. The "mikes" who testified before the grand jury had been plucked so long ago that the statute of limitations barred any presecution at this late date." Mr. Swenson appeared doubtful as to the chance of Maybray being brought to lowa from Little Rock in the near future. He said: "The Arkansas authorities are doing all they can to have the order of Maybray's removal to lowa revoked. Maybray's attorneys are also making every effort in the same direction. The United States attorney general has been appealed to, the United past States officials in Iowa have been communicated with and any official who might possibly have influence in the matter has been consulted. I do not know what the outcome will be. I believe, however, that Maybray will be brought to Iowa sooner or later. It is likely that the grand jury at Little Rock will return indictments against Maybray and if this should prove to be the case it is possible he may be tried there at this term of court."

Mr. Swenson sald he intended going to Chicago last evening and from there to Not a Single Arrest for a Serious Little Rock, where the federal grand jury will convene Tuesday.

FITCY MAKES EXPLANATION

Business Worries and Constant Application Too Much for Him.

DEEPLY REGRETS HIS ACTION

of Operation for Appendicitis n Fiction Intended Simply to Throw Searchers Off Track and Let Him Disappear.

Edward P. Fitch of this city, who last October, while traveling in Europe, dropped out of sight and after a fruitless search had been made for him turned up at Naples a few weeks ago, has issued a statement in tended to clear up the mystery of his disappearance. Mr. Fitch is still visiting relatives in Evanston, Ill., and the date of his return to his home in this city is as yet to an intimate friend of the family here mittee having this campaign in charge. with the request that it be given full publicity in the newspapers, follows:

Lyon refurning to Council Bluffs, my home since boyhood, and having, since arriving at New York two weeks ago, been placed in the possession of many facts, it is my duty, voluntarily undertaken, to make a plain statement of events occurring during the four painful months of my absence.

The reluctance of one to return to the scenes where explanation must be made for his misdeeds must be apparent to all, but the necessity for such an act is equally apparent.

Realizing that no words can ever make reparation for the suffering endured by my family and friends; that no words can express the gratitude I feel for the sympathy, encouragement and aid offered to my sisters; that no words can extenuate my actions, yet I feel it may help to a fuller understanding if the simple facts are known.

known.

Appreciating gratefully that the press has been a kindly medium through which my friends have been kept informed of the efforts put forth in my behalf, yet some articles published are to be deeply regretted because of their inaccuracies and the following statement will assist in correcting these.

Deeply absorbed in a business requiring Deeply absorbed in a business requiring oftese application and chreful study, a business filled with a mass of seemingly bewildering detail, it became impossible to me to give up any portion of it, even though realizing the necessity for it enfeined by an ever increasing business.

In justice, I admit that my employers often urged me to relinquish much of this work; to place details in the hands of others and to secure relaxation by occasional vacations. Even this seemed impossible to me.

Thought of Self-Destruction. Increasing difficulties and complexities were brooded over and magnified until they assumed undue proportions and the daily task became too heavy for proper accomplishment. Outdoor exercise presented no assumed undue proportions and the daily task became too heavy for pruper accompilshment. Outdoor exercise presented no attractions, hence there was no physical offset to this mental strain.

Gradually and insidiously the thought of self-destruction took possession of me. This idea remained until hours of morbid thought were given to it. Finally came a distinct apprehension of entire collapse.

At this time a trip to Europe was suggested and urged by my employers. This had been my life's desire and seemed to present a solution of the problem.

From the moment of boarding the train at Council Bluffs on August 28, 1908, conflicting plans for the future occupied my mind. Business requiring attention enroute was, at times, properly considered or again neglected with an indifference that is yet incomprehensible to me.

During the first five weeks after my arrival in England I wrote frequent letters to my family and friends. The inspiration to travel buoyed my mind and apparently relieved the tension, but later I found that my business worries were not diminished by retrospect nor rendered less ominous in the future.

At this juncture I decided to disappear and invented a plausible story to cover

At this juncture I decided to disappear and invented a plausible story to cover that disappearance. I had often expressed a fear of appendicitis. I wrote the letter of October 20, 1908, stating that I was about to undergo an operation, believing this would furnish a clew for a search among the London hospitals, which, terminating unsuccessfully, would be abandoned and that I would be mourned for as dead.

What followed during the next two weeks I cannot clearly recall. They were nights and days of seif-reproach and anguish. The materials for seif-destruction had been with me for years. Worn out in body and soul, I fought against what seemed inevitable. Postponing the end from day to day, I plunged into travel and study as deeply as if it were physical dissipation. The latter never entered my mind.

Question of Motive.

Question of Motive. Those who are most kindly disposed towards me may attribute this entire act to a disturbed and diseased brain; those less charitably inclined will conclude that my action was cruelly deliberate. Either opinion, I believe, should be moderated, but when I consider my moral training and standards, I am forced to conclude that, while perhaps not fully accountable, I must still bear the responsibility for acts which were saved from being criminal by a power not my own.

from being criminal by a power not my own.

The particulars of being brought to a full sense of my position; my determination to return home and face whatever consequences awaited me; my resolve to rid myself forever of the incubus that had shadowed years of life, the peculiar circupmetances that brought me to this decision are known to those most deeply wronged. I may,perhaps, be allowed to omit the details. I would say, however, that the lack of funds referred to in the first cablegram from Naples was incidental and not instrumental. I truly believe that the great change in my thought and purpose was brought about by the Divine Spirit who watched over, directed and finally controlled my devious way. I have undoubtedly lost friends whose confidence in me has been destroyed. In no manner blaming them, I wish to express my most sincere gratitude to those whose assurances have led me to believe that they will continue the same inspiring friendship that has existed in the past.

Above all else, I wish earnestly to

Above all else, I wish earnestly to thank the many who have been a bul-work of strength in their actions, words wark of strength in their actions, words or unspoken sympathy to my sisters, who have so bravely and nobly borne a sorrow they should not have eben called upon to endure: a sorrow intensified by the death of our only brother, which occurred but a few days before the cable-gram from Naples was sent. His high moral character and integrity, well known to all, I shall endeavor to emulate.

Treating The Wrong Disease Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality they are all only symptoms caused by some weakness or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots without the use of alcohol and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.
