A meeting of the republican state committee will soon be held for the purpose of taking stock of the new laws possed by the democratic legislature. Chairman Keifer has already given the new legislation some consideration and has given notice of his intention to call the state ommittee together soon.

Under the new law the democrats are in better shape than the republicans, it is said, in so far as agreeing on candidates is concerned, because no democrat will even suggest his own name without permission from the Peerless Boss, So, with only three democrats on the ticket and as half dozen or more republicans, the democrats, it is figured, might have a change elect a judge or two, notwithstanding the record of its late legislature. It is because of this that the suggestion has seen made for the republicans to hold a convention to discuss candidates at about the time the platform convention meets
