Redfern Whalebone Corsets

This picture has become quite noted as a Redfern Model-noted for its simplicity of style and beauty of line.

It was made by Stuart Travis, an artist, whose work is not only truly beautiful but truly faithful, since he always draws from life. A Redfern corset was the figure foundation from which he worked.

We have a complete stock of these corsets from which we can fit any size woman, giving her the long, straight lines sometimes called the curveless form.

We must mention the garters, which are the Security Rubber Button, the most satisfactory supporter there is. A Redfern Model may be had all the way from $3.50 to $15.00 per pair.

Government Attorney Kellogg Begins Closing Argument After Five Solid Days of Talk to Court.

Sr. LOUIS, April 10 .- After a continuous rgument of five days, one of the longest ever granted by a federal court in this country, special United States Attorney General Frank B. Kellogg this morning mmenced his closing address to the court in behalf of the government in the latter's suit to have the Standard Oil company of New Jersey dissolved as a violator of the Sherman anti-trust act.

The case has a record for bigness, the evidence being larger by half than that ever before taken in a single case, the demanding that oil go to the exempted list. record containing in all 11,000,000 words. $5,000,000. Mr. Kellogg this morning, after paying his respects to the defense, after the fashion of lawyers, commenced his argument by discussing the contention Lawyer David T. Watson of Pittsburg anent the Northern Securities decision. Mr. Watson, who argued that the case for the government, in the present suit, insisted that the conditions between the defendant and the facts of the "securities" case were not analogous and, therefore, not applicable as a controling authority.

Original Companies Competitive. Mr. Kellogg argued that the twenty companies signing the original Standard trust agreement were just as competitive, if anything, more so, than the railways subscribing to the agreement in the Northern Securities case.

to Russia, who died here yesterday, left The government attorney carefully re viewed the facts as well as the law, and claimed that the two cases were identical and that by no stretch of the imagination or sophistry could Mr. Watson's argument be legally or technically logical.

After passing that point, Mr. Kellogg took up the points raised by John G. Milburn of New York, who narrated the facts of the case from the defendant's viewpoint; John G. Johnson, who discussed certain phases of the law and, lastly, Moritz Rosenthal of Chicago, who confined his address to a discussion of the alleged unfair competition and discriminatory railway rates.

Mr. Kellogg also took sharp issue with the defendant's maps, showing that the price of crude and refined oil had followed the general increases and declines of prices of household commodities, even to being lower as a rule. The federal at- Death Due to Attack of Influenza, torney insisted that the price of both crude and refined oil had been higher than the proportionate increase of general supplies, offering a new set of tables, prepared by Dr. A.
