Local Banks Make a Fine Showing of Deposits. Bank deposits in South Omaha, by the official statement issued yesterday for the close of business April 25, exceeded $10,000,000 for the first time in the history of the market city. This enviable figure was reached by a splendid increase over the former statement issued in February. At that time the deposits in South Omaha banks were between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000. The total gain since that time has exceeded $1,500,000. The banks are justly proud of the record of South Omaha. Another good showing is that the cash on hand is larger than ever before, being in excess of $4,000,000. The banks combined have loaned above $8,000,000. A comparison of the banks shows that the prosperity has been proportionately divided. All have made better showings.

Hearing on Saloon Licenses. The South Omaha Board of Fire and Police Commissioners met last night to pass on about forty liquor licenses and to hear protests, should there be any. The protests were narrowed down to two, all others having been settled by agreement, since all related to the matter of the publication of the legal notices. One protest was brought by Elmer Thomas of Omaha against A. H. Fryes, who applied for the saloon at the South Omaha Live Stock exchange. The ground advanced in the deposition was that the petition was faulty and the saloon was in reality owned by the Union Stock yards as a corporation and therefore a license could not issue. John Fida was protested by residents of the neighborhood.

All those applicants against whom no protests were lodged and who had completed the necessary legal steps in the matter of petition, bond and fee were granted licenses. The protested licenses were passed over until tonight, when the hearing will be granted. Any other applicants who at that time are eligible will also be granted licenses. The total number of applicants this year is about seventy, as compared to eighty-six or eighty-seven last year. Two or three later applications will probably come in, but the board does not expect more than twenty-five applicants at the most.

Athletic Exhibition. The Shamrock club gave its usual fortnightly athletic exhibition last night. The attraction of the evening was a wrestling match between Al Marcan and Pat Hannigan. Hannigan was outwrestled and after a plucky contest he was defeated in straight falls. The crowd appreciated the work of the South Omaha man and gave him plenty of applause, although it was seen that he would be defeated. Rud Smith refereed the bout. Some practice boxing was also on the bill. Several challenges were interchanged. Marcan challenged any heavyweight wrestler of Omaha to meet him for a side bet of $500.

Magic City Gossip. The Owis had an athletic exhibition last night at Eagle hall. H. C. Richmond of Lincoln was visiting in South Omaha yesterday. John MacMillan has been confined to his home from an injury to his foot.

The date of the commencement to be given by the South Omaha Hospital association to its graduate nurses is set for

Creighton Medics Feast

Annual Alumni Banquet Brings Out a Fine Array of Doctors. Fully 100 alumni and members of the present graduating class of the John A. Creighton Medical college attended Thursday's banquet, clinics and business meeting of the Alumni association, the occasion being the annual convention of the organization. Dr. Fred Langdon of Omaha was chosen president and Dr. R. Rice, also of this city, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Amid happy scenes of reunion, words of appreciation of their alma mater and welcome to the class of 1909, which will be graduated Saturday, the banquet, the principal session of the annual convention, was held at the Loyal last night. Dr. H. L. Akin, retiring president, performed the duties of toastmaster with easy grace and becoming tact and humor.

Character the Cornerstone. Rev. Father W. F. Whelan of the university faculty delivered a masterful address on "A Study in Character." Declaring that material progress is the watchword of today, he continued:

"While watching this progress of the world without, what of the world within? Progress is of more vital concern to us as individuals, for thought states and nations rise, fall and perish, the world of self lives on forever. The child is the father of the man, so it is worth while to weigh well the work we have to do in shaping, moulding and fashioning the character of the child that it may progress and attain to the dignity and stature of perfect manhood. It is not learning, but character, that makes the man." Asking what character is and defining in apt words the term, he discussed the means of developing it and declared that self-knowledge is the basis and prerequisite. Concluding, he won hearty applause for the depth and sincerity of purpose of his remarks and the eloquence of his delivery.

Doctor's Chance to Do Good. "There is no man, the minister not excepted, who has greater opportunities for doing good than the medical practitioner," said Dr. H. B. Jennings of the faculty. He spoke in reply to the toast, "Our College," and along the lines of choosing a school, loyalty to it, of the brotherhood and sisterhood of the medical profession, against the possible tendency of commercializing the calling and of opportunities afforded for benefiting humanity.

"Our Class," the toast by Dr. Sidney Smith, '08, recounted in interesting fashion the mistakes and pranks of his fellow classmates in their course toward the medical degree, while Dr. Lucian Stark, '08, of Henderson, Neb., offered for his part of the toasters' menu a most laughable account of a "Physiological Wedding."

Bill Rubin was joined in wedlock to Miss An Thrac, according to his account of the ceremony, and among the guests were General Parems, Major Surgery, Ade Nitis, Peri Cardium and Mac Roeyte, who though probably not acquaintances of many Omahans, were, nevertheless, the cause of much amusement to the doctors.

Practicing in the Country. "The Country Doctor" was a toast ably handled by Dr. H. L. Newell, '08, of Alexandria, Neb., who had considerable valuable advice to offer the graduating medical students, along with numerous entertaining and funny accounts of experiences that have been his lot.

Dr. D. C. Bryant, dean of the medical college of Creighton university, closed the speech-making with an expression of his pleasure in meeting his former students and friends again and adding words of welcome to the incoming members of the alumni association and words of appreciation and praise of the institution to what had already been said. During Thursday morning and afternoon the alumni were in attendance at various clinics held especially for their benefit at St. Joseph's hospital. The physicians in charge were Drs. C. C. Allison, J. F. Lard, H. P. Hamilton, D. C. Bryant, F. E. Coalter and A. D. Dunn.
