Traffic Bureau Chooses McCord as Its Chairman

He is Head of Board and McVann is Formally Made the Manager.

The sixteen members of the board of the Commercial club and Omaha Grain exchange, responsible for the new traffic bureau met Thursday evening and formally organized.

W. H. McCord was elected chairman of the board and E. J. McVann manager, and they were given authority to equip an office with furniture and fixtures.

The bureau opens Saturday, but owing to the fact that the grain exchange has not as yet elected a secretary to succeed E. J. McVann he will remain in charge for a few days. It is hoped to provide room for the bureau on the fifth floor of the Board of Trade building with the Commercial club, as the bureau was named "The Transportation Bureau of the Omaha Commercial Club."

Miss Ruth Ferguson, who has been secretary to Mr. McVann, will be his secretary at the traffic bureau.

which crops may be successfully raised by "dry farming" and on lands still undeveloped where rainfall is bounteous.

W. O. Paley, assistant general manager of the National Corn Exposition, said: "We will do everything we can to assist the land and irrigation exposition. It is one of the best ideas of which I have heard recently and will stimulate the movement to further which the National Corn Exposition was planned—better farming."

HERE LIBERTY WAS BORN

Old Boston Town House Cradle of Representative Government in America.

In the "Story of the Old Boston Town House," which has just been issued by Colonel Josiah Henry Benson of Boston, the author has this to say on the interesting subject:

"The first important building for secular purposes in New England was the Boston town house, built in 1588 at the head of State street, where the present old state house stands.

"This town house was destroyed in the great fire of 1711. The interest which properly attaches to the history of the present building, constructed the year after the fire, has obscured the more important history of the original building. It may be of value to those who love the memory of the golden time, when civil government in New England was getting under way, to give the story and political life of the town and colony, and to review some of the events which occurred in it and about it.

"No building in America has a history more interesting or instructive to the student of free government than the Boston town house. Within its wooden walls American independence was born. It was the cradle of representative government in the new world, and a separation of executive, legislative and judicial powers were developed by the contests waged in and about it. Here freedom of religious worship was first recognized in Massachusetts, and freedom of speech and of the press, though at first denied, finally prevailed.

"The Boston town house was the seat of government of the colony under the original colony charter, from 1630 to 1694; of the government of the province of New England under royal authority, from 1694 until 1699; of the government by the people, under the name of the 'Council of Safety and the Conservation of the Peace' from 1699 until the establishment of the province of Massachusetts bay in New England under the royal charter of 1780, and then under this charter until 1780.

"The accomplished Bellingham, the brave and popular Leverett, the wise and the town house was for more than a half a century the center of the public affairs of the town and of the colony. The laws of the colony were there published and the regulations of the town were there posted. Distances were measured from it, and those liable to military duty were summoned to assemble at it. Public meetings of humiliation and prayer and festivities were held in it. It was illumined and decorated for victories, and darkened and draped for defeat.

"It was here that royal proclamations were read, and here the people met in protest against the tyranny of the royal governors and the oppression of the crown. The stocks, the whipping post, the prison and the gallows stood close by, and the sentences pronounced by the courts within the town house were executed under its walls.

"In this building the pulse of the people beat, and it became saturated and vibrant with the spirit of the time. Its story is the story of what was done in it and about it—the story of the time—and is best told in the language of the records of the time. No modern phrases can bring to our minds the conditions of that golden time as effectively as the quaint and simple language of the records which were then written.

"The most important of these is the rec-

LAND AND IRRIGATION EXPO

Big Show Planned by Chicago, with the Tribune Back of the Enterprise.

Railroad and land interests in Chicago have started a movement to hold a land and irrigation exposition and its success has been assured by the Chicago Tribune assuming financial and executive responsibility.

The exposition will be held in Chicago November 22 to December 4, just previous to the National Corn exposition at Omaha, which is December 6 to 15. Many of those interested in the exposition in Omaha are to boost the Chicago show, which is to be known as the United States Land and Irrigation Exposition.

Among those well known in Omaha on the advisory committee are: Darius Miller, vice president of the Burlington; J. H. Hilland, vice president of the Illinois Central; John Sebastian, passenger traffic manager of the Rock Island; James Keeley, managing editor, and Harrison M. Paiker, business manager of the Chicago Tribune, are also members of the committee.

The purposes of the United States Land and Irrigation Exposition are to illustrate to prospective settlers methods of cultivation and to show what can be produced on land now under irrigation, on land on

Sleepy Hewitt Pleads Guilty

Fined Fifty Dollars for Standing Off Game Warden with a Gun.

Leon Hewitt, alias "Sleepy," pleaded guilty in county court Friday morning to a charge of assault upon Deputy Game Warden J. J. Boehler of Lincoln and was fined $50 and costs, which was promptly paid. The charge also included a threat to kill.

This disposes of the charges against Hewitt growing out of the moonlight visit to Cut-Off lake by Boehler and Frank Brown, when Hewitt held up the officers with a sawed-off gun and compelled them to unmanacle his friends. On a charge of illegal fishing, which followed, he had already paid a fine.

Hewitt denied vigorously that he was at the lake Thursday night when the wardens filled F. C. Howe full of buckshot.

"I was uptown from 4 o'clock until early this morning," said Hewitt, "and when I got back I found that a $500 seine had been taken by somebody. What right has anybody got to take property that way?"
