MAYOR NAMES NO ONE NOW

Refuses to Say Who His Appointees Will Be.

MAY HAVE TO KEEP T. FLYNN

Knocks in the Head the Story About Slipping the Skids Under Ab Waggoner, the License Inspector.

Under the charter the mayor must send to the council for confirmation the names of all appointees to charter positions on the fourth Tuesday after election and on the sixth Tuesday he must send in the names of appointees for offices created by ordinance. There are only five charter offices and the others have all been created by ordinance. The five offices are commissioner of health, plumbing inspector, boiler inspector, electrician and prosecutor. The appointments must be made in the order named.

Mayor Dahlman persistently refuses to "loosen up" on his appointments and says he will make no announcement before the day the names will be sent to the council, which will be on June 1 and June 15. When asked about some of the party, leaders who are feeding at the public crib, the mayor said:

"Well, I think I will have to keep Tom Flynn."

He laid no special emphasis on the word "have" and gave no inkling that by using that expression he meant he would be forced to keep the boss of the local democracy, who holds the title of street commissioner.

"I don't know where they got that story," said the mayor in replying to a question as to the truth of the assertion in the local democratic paper that Ab Waggoner, city license inspector, is slated for slaughter.

"I guess that story is without as much foundation as some other foolish yarns published from time to time," he said.

Mr. Waggoner has been on the anxious seat for some time, but his friends say the mayor dare not turn him down, for if he does he will lose the friendship of the South Omaha commission men, many of whom live in Omaha. The license inspector has lost his strongest friend in the person of Alma Jackson, the seventh ward councilman who was defeated.

Mayor Wants Chaplain for City Council

He is Chaplain for the German Home Bowlers and Advocates That Office.

Mayor Dahlman favors the appointment of a chaplain for the city council chamber. He says that since the council will be evenly divided between the republicans and the democrats, in the future it would be well to have some pacifying force present, and that the best way to start off the sessions smoothly and instill in the hearts of all present that feeling of brotherly love would be to open the evening sessions with prayer.

The mayor says he fails to see that it makes any difference if no other city council has a chaplain and if Omaha wants one (or feels the need of one) it is not the business of any other city. Further, no other city, as far as he knows, has a cowboy for mayor.

"The nation loves Edward Everett Hale, the venerable chaplain of the United States senate; the city would soon learn to love the chaplain of our city council," said the mayor. "He could do a great work, would pour oil on the troubled waters, put the boys in a kindly feeling to one another right at the jump, and there would be little rag chewing and scuffling if the divine blessing was invoked on their labors."

Mayor Dahlman was Friday night elected chaplain of the bowling team at the German home and he likes the place so well that he favors the appointment of a chaplain for the council. The mayor bowled a game at the German home and won. The Germans were so pleased with the executive that they wished to give him an office, but all the offices were filled. They therefore created the office of chaplain and elected him by unanimous vote.

Lee Bridges, from the Second, is the only councilman to whom the mayor has broached the subject of a council chaplain, but he met with a rebuff.

"We don't want any chaplain," said Bridges. "He would be in the way and would take up too much time. If the councilmen will all go to church and live up to what is taught there they would not want to throw books and ink bottles at one another in the council chamber. Preachers are all right in church, but they have no place in the council chamber."

Champion Sheep Shearer Shorn of Ten Dollars

Zachary Crandall Gets Caught in the Shears of the Police Judge.

"I kin shear 120 sheep in eleven hours," declared Zachary Crandall, a sheep shearer from Perry, Ia., in police court Friday. "but I ain't sheared a single lamb yet."

Zack was fined $10 and costs by Judge Crawford, who thought that Crandall's attempts to "shear some lambs" were worthy of encouragement. The charge against him was drunkenness and disturbing the peace.

When a certain sleek attendant behind a mahogany counter refused to part with some of his skeels in return for a check Crandall tendered, the latter began a "shearing" campaign that was certainly intended to be a clipper. However, Detectives McDonald and Walker, two of Chief Savage's enemies of criminal error, rudely intruded and took the wool cutter to jail.

But a night's rest on the luxurious yellow pine benches kindly provided for indigent visitors by the jailer, failed to convince Crandall of the folly of carrying on his shearing while in Omaha. So, naturally, when Sleuth Walker walked the shearer up to his honor's shrine of the blindfolded goddess to be shorn, Zack made flippant criticism upon spring certain hirsute effluence upon the lower portion of the officer's countenance.

As the result, Crandall is serving out his sentence in a cozy single room at Sheriff Bralley's free soup emporium, while Walker is trying to live down the cuts marks of the shearer's brawny fist upon the cuticular portion of his lower jaw.

Chamberlain No Worse.
LONDON, May 14.—Austen Chamberlain declared today there was no truth in rumors current in the House of Commons lobbies last night that Joseph Chamberlain, his father, had suffered a relapse.
