Everybody's June fiction is rather out of the ordinary. In the first place, Eleanor Abbott maintains the standard set by her famous prize stories. In "Along the Ripply River," she tells of love and adventure and heroism. Robert Dunn recounts the insubordination of one of Uncle Sam's sallors who blondined his hair for the good of the service. Anna Yeaman Condict tells SPECIAL FEATURES: Madeirs, Egypt, India, Ceylon, Burms, Java, Borneo, Philippines Japan. The Red Book Magazine for June sounds a distinct note of summer. It is doubted if Jacques Futrelle has ever written a sprightlier or more whimsically humorous story than "The Greek God," which is offered as the leading story of the issue. aptly "Good Bye Jack." A story that takes hold of the reader is Emilie Henson Knipe's "The Ambition of Maggle Kerrigan," a shop-girl study. Another story characteristic of the author is Edwin Ass. Dix's "Unconsidered Trifles." There are many frank laughs in "I Put My Poot in It," by William Gilmore Beymer. William Hamilton Osborne's "The Ruling Passion" is a fictional treatment of the adventures of a man gone money-mad.
