NO COMPROMISE, SAYS JIM
Agreement on Appointees Not Hoped for Now by Mayor.
TRAITORS TAKE THE SAME VIEW
Councilman Johnson Believes the Fight Now Centers on Health Officer Connell and Boss Flynn for Commissioner.

Mayor Dahlman and Councilman Johnson, "traitor" democrat, say they think a compromise on appointments to city positions can not now be effected. Councilman Hammel, republican, says he hopes yet for an amicable settlement; and Councilman Bridges, "friendly" democrat, is of the opinion that the mayor can eventually force confirmation of his appointees.
According to Councilman Johnson, the fight now centers on Tom Flynn, street commissioner, and Dr. Connell, health commissioner, but the mayor says that the city prosecutor position is the stumbling block, and that the republican councilmen and the "traitors" are holding out for Walter P. Thomas, a Jack, for that position when he has told them he absolutely would not appoint him. The mayor says that Thomas is just as objectionable to him as Daniel, the present incumbent, and that he and the council can get together on a hundred other men equally efficient.
Told Thomas He Would Not
"I told Thomas in the presence of the republican councilmen that I would not appoint him and give my reasons," says the mayor. "I told him that after we had elected him to the legislature he went down to Lincoln and worked against us and helped fix up the charter so it would cripple me as much as possible. Thomas is, therefore, one man I will not appoint. And the mayor laid considerable emphasis on the word 'not.'"
"The council and I can get together on these appointments, but I do not look for anything of the sort," continued the mayor, "and I will tell you right here and now that I will keep my charter officers in office and they can't stop me."
"It is correct that the council can abolish the ordinance office and it can do this if so elected, but it will be done over my veto. But the charter officers cannot be touched by any council, and I promise you that I will be here right on the job every minute and the council will never get a chance to appoint to these offices men that I do not want."

The mayor says there is no danger of his being out of town on a Tuesday until his appointees are confirmed, and a sporting match between Mr. Bryan, Colonel Guffey and Roger Sullivan would not be sufficient inducement to make him leave his watch.
health commissioner, street commissioner. There are six charter offices: health commissioner, street commissioner, plumbing inspector, boiler inspector, city prosecutor and city electrician. These offices can not be abolished by the council. The ordinance offices which might be abolished, include the license inspector, inspector of weights and measures, gas commissioner, market master, meat inspector, milk inspector, veterinarian, custodian of the city hall, and the several janitors, engineers and elevator men in the city hall.
"If this business, runs along too long, these offices can be abolished and after the officials have been thru and the offices can be recreated," declares Councilman Johnson, but he declined to say whether he favors such a move.
Jim Throws a Blast
"I would like to see the council try to abolish these offices, even though it has the power to do so," said Councilman Bridges. "It would be a nice how-do-you-do to abolish the office of inspector of weights and measures, for instance, and then get only 1,500 pounds of coal for a ton. Of course, the offices would be created again, but if the council then refused to confirm the mayor's appointees what would be gained? This sort of a move would never go and the people would point the councilmen on the back so hard that they would wish they had never tried it."
Boss Flynn says he is secure, because the office of street commissioner is now provided for by charter amendment, but Councilman Johnson read the riot act to Flynn and Connell and told them that the council would "kick" them yet. According to Johnson, everything would have been all right had the conference slate gone through last Tuesday, but when the mayor flunked and sent in his phony list "it was all up with Flynn and Connell."
