

"I AM NOT ONE OF THE GANG"

Shelton Insists He Did Not Help Rob Overland Train.

NOT IDENTIFIED AS SUCH YET

Denver Captive Says He Just Happened to Get Into Bad Company and Got in that Auto Photograph.

"I was not a member of the gang that held up the Overland a while ago," declared Jack Shelton, the Denver captive, alleged to be the fourth holdup man.

He was seen in the office of the county jail while waiting to be locked up, after having been measured by the Heritson system at the city jail and photographed on South Sixteenth street for the "rogue" gallery.

"I'm not a desperate bandit, like they are trying to make me out to be," Shelton continued. "He seemed willing to talk and spoke without being questioned."

"I just happened to be in bad company out at Denver when that auto picture was taken. It may be a fact that the other men in the picture had police records, but I did not know it then and don't now, either."

"They have been trying their best to identify me as one of the men who held up the train," he said with a smile, "but they haven't done it, although about twenty men have tried. They can't identify me, either. I wasn't there to be seen, so there isn't any use for the witnesses to try to make out that I was."

Does Not Look Like Bandit. It has been remarked by a number of persons who have seen him, including some of the officers, that he does not look like a bandit. Only a pair of keen eyes display the idea given by the rest of his appearance that he is a young farmer.

Shelton has not seen the other three men who the police say are his partners in crime. The Stephenson woman has not been seen by any of them to speak to. All five of the party are closely watched and confined in separate cells, except the woman, who is kept in the matron's department.

According to Mrs. McPherson, the matron, Lillian Stephenson does not talk at all about the holdup case, the four men, their trial or the part she is to play in it.

"She seems to be comfortable and makes the best of her situation," says Mrs. McPherson. "So far as her presence here is concerned, she seems quite an agreeable woman. I think she is several years older than she claims to be."

After Shelton was measured by the police Thursday morning, he was shown to August Papez, his wife and friend, who live on a farm two miles south of South Omaha. Papez thought the three might be able to identify Shelton as a suspicious looking man who asked for work and was hired at their farm the Sunday following the arrest of the other three suspects. They failed to do so, however.

Shelton is Not the Man. "The man who came to our place," said Papez to a deputy marshal who accompanied them, "wore his black coat but so far down over his face that at first glance we could only see his chin. He said he was out of money and wanted to go to work."

"That was on Sunday and he refused to work on that day. He told us he would come back Monday morning, but we never saw him again. While at our place he ate an awful lot, and we thought afterwards that maybe he was one of the holdup men who had been hiding for a few days. This man Shelton is not the man."

When Shelton was being seen by Papez Thursday morning, he looked him squarely in the face, made no effort to hide or distort his features and smiled when he heard that they thought he might be the man they had in mind.

Played With Abraham Lincoln

When Little Boy

Ex-Slave, Hundred and Three Years Old, Visits Son in Omaha and Tells of Marse Abe.

A playmate of Abraham Lincoln is in town.

The weight of 100 years makes no difference with some men and Robert Stearns of Topeka, Kan., is one of these men. Mr. Stearns is 103 years of age and he has come from Topeka alone to make a visit to his son, Tib, proprietor of the Newport restaurant on Dodge street. Though he has lived a score more years than most men, Mr. Stearns is able to get around alone, take care of himself, and reads the daily paper without the use of glasses.

Robert Stearns is a negro and was in slavery sixty years, and the son with whom he is visiting was born in slavery.

The older Stearns was born and raised in Kentucky, near Hodgenville, the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, and he says he and the president were playmates when they were boys. He did not see Mr. Lincoln after the family moved to Illinois. Twice he was sold into Missouri, but both times was bought back by his old master. He saw relatives bought and sold, and the last time he saw his mother was when she walked seventy-five miles from Louisville at the age of 119 years to see him before she went south to enter the service of a new master.

The last year of the war Mr. Stearns ran away from his master and joined the union forces, fighting in a corps under General Grant until the close of the war. Mr. Stearns has certificates to prove his age in the event it should be questioned.

He was arrested and taken to jail early Thursday morning.

A small truck gardener who took the animal to the police station because it was at large and tramping on his garden, was anxious to introduce it into police jurisdiction that he actually led it through the south door of the building down the hallway to the office of Desk Sergeant Marshall, through the iron gate and right into Captain Mostyn's private office.

By the time the surprised officers realized what was going on the horse, a big bay brute, was familiarly nibbling at a bunch of reports on top of the desk, and when he was hastily ejected from the captain's office, he almost stampeded a couple of score of bluecoats who were lined up for roll call.

The owner of the animal arrived at the jail and took the horse away soon afterward.

MONEY HIDDEN IN ROBBER'S LEG

Contents of Mail Pouch Tucked Away in Unique Place.

HOLE MADE FOR THE PURPOSE

Bandit's Leg, It Should Be Stated, Was of Wood—Inspectors Tell How They Caught Their Man.

Postoffice Inspectors H. S. Grogan of Lincoln and Frank Frayser of Kansas City, who have been assisting in the Overland mail robbery case, are in Omaha as witnesses before the federal grand jury. Both inspectors work in this territory and Kansas. Since the Overland mail robbery in Omaha May 22 Inspectors Grogan and Frayser have made an important capture of registered mail robbers at Wall, S. D., and landed their men in jail after a chase all over Iowa and South Dakota.

The ringleader of the robbers was Otto Battles, a one-legged fellow who was formerly driver of a mail wagon between the Topeka general office and the depot.

"The case is an interesting one," said Inspector Grogan, "and has kept us pretty busy. The Topeka postoffice occupies the same general relation to Kansas that Omaha does to Nebraska, all monthly remittances being made from the Kansas postoffices through the Topeka office and all rural carriers of the state are paid from that office. Since January 1 there has been a systematic disappearance of valuable registered mail from the pouches on their way from the Topeka depot to the postoffice. This occurred only on the first of each month when the outside remittances came in. We became satisfied that it was a case of someone having illegal possession of a registered mail pouch key. But no keys were missing, as every key is numbered and its location known.

Battles Under Suspicion. "Suspicion finally pointed to Otto Battles, who had formerly been a driver of the mail wagon, but who had been laid off a few years ago by falling off the wagon and being run over. A mail wagon driver was also suspected, but nothing could be secured against the latter, so we kept on the trail of Battles. He disappeared from Topeka. We traced him to Council Bluffs, Omaha, Perry, Ia., Chadron, Neb., and Rapid City, and finally to Wall, S. D.

"He kept low during April and finally reappeared in Topeka in May with a partner, Merlin Reed. June 1 the loss of several valuable registered packages was reported from the mail wagon and Frayser and I being in Topeka at the time, went right to work. We followed Battles to his home, a squallid place in North Topeka, and reached the house about ten minutes after he hid.

"As we approached the shanty we detected the odor of burning coal and guessed at once that Battles was burning the evidences of his robbery. We cordoned him in the shanty, extinguished the fire and found fragments of burned registered envelopes and a part of a registered receipt. Reed was also at the house, as was Battles' brother-in-law, a man named Stroud, and Battles' mother. They were all placed under arrest, as was the regular driver of the screened mail wagon.

Carried Money in His Leg. "We searched Battles, but found nothing. Then we examined the stump of his leg and there found a cushion pocket in which was a registered mail pouch key and over $200 in money packed away neatly in the pocket. About the house we found all the evidences of a thieves' den, fragments of articles evidently stolen from the mails during the spring and winter. The money, being marked, was easily identified as a part of the remittances from postoffices out in the state of Kansas.

"An aged blacksmith by the name of Clark, hearing of the arrest of Battles, reported to us that he had at one time made a key for Battles during the spring and winter. He was committing a crime. It appears that Battles had stolen a registered mail lock and disguised it in such a way that Clark could not tell what it was, took the rest apart and had the key fitted. The rest was easy. The key would open any mail pouch.

"Battles' plan was to lie in wait for the mail wagon and if it came to his door, the driver, we will call him Smith, being in collusion, would leave the wagon for a while, letting Battles drive it alone around through the warehouses in a roundabout way, and by placing the desired mail sack between his knees, would open the sack and take out the packages he wanted, rifle them at his pleasure, and then, meeting Smith at some appointed spot, would turn the wagon over to him, reload the pouch, and then disappear, later dividing the profits with Smith and Reed.

"The amount of money secured by Battles and Reed since January 1 is over $1,000."

Gallantry is Origin of Suit

Man Who Gives Seat to Woman is Struck and Sues Street Car Company.

In Solon Walker's gallantry lies the origin of a suit against the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company which is being heard by Judge Kennedy in district court.

Walker was riding on a northbound Sixteen street car when he rose to give his seat to a woman. The new Haxon cafe was being built at the time and a high board fence had been put in near the car tracks and parallel with them. Walker struck his shoulder against the fence as he rose to let the girl have the seat and he asserts that in the hurlyburly which resulted from his being bounced about, he suffered serious and permanent injuries for which he would like $5,000.

BATEMAN GETS TWENTY DAYS

Young Man Caught in Wrong Place at the Public Library Gets a Term.

As a suspicious character in connection with the alleged attempt to steal some valuable coins from the Byron Reed collection in the city library, Norman Bateman, a young man who says he is from Kingston, Canada, was sent to jail for twenty days by Police Judge Crawford.

Bateman was arrested near the coin case when found with a rasp or file in his pocket at the time the burglar alarm was automatically set off by some one springing the lock. Nothing was stolen.

Believing that Ed Crumley, another young man, was a partner of Bateman in the alleged attempt to rob the coin case, the police arrested him Wednesday afternoon and are holding him. Crumley says his home is in Memphis, Tenn. Detectives Murphy and Ring, who made the arrest, assert Crumley was in the Byron Reed room of the library building in which Bateman was found, when the alarm went off.

Men Past Fifty in Danger

Men past middle life had found comfort and relief in Foley's Kidney Remedy, especially for enlarged prostate gland, which is very common among elderly men. L. E. Morris, Dexter, Ky., writes: "Up to a year ago my father suffered from kidney and bladder trouble and several physicians pronounced it incurable. He was the proudest man I ever knew and he was advised an operation. On account of his age we were afraid he could not stand it and I recommended Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the first bottle relieved him, and after taking the second bottle he was no longer troubled with this complaint. Sold by all druggists."

Father Hurley's First Mass Will Be Made Notable

Omaha Boy Will Enter Actively on Priesthood Sunday at Sacred Heart.

A big religious ceremony is planned for the celebration of the first mass of Rev. D. J. Hurley in Sacred Heart church, next Sunday. There will be a solemn high mass at 10:30 a. m., of which Father Hurley will be celebrant; Rev. F. J. Judge, high priest; Rev. Charles Mullan of South Omaha, deacon; Rev. John G. McNamara of Bloomfield, Neb., subdeacon; Rev. Thomas Byrne of Kenrick seminary, St. Louis, master of ceremonies. The sermon will be preached by Very Rev. D. M. Moriarty of Benson. After the first mass Father Hurley will give his priestly blessing to the congregation individually at the altar rail of the sanctuary.

As is generally known in this city, where he has hosts of friends, Father Dan Hurley is a young man of great promise in the priesthood. He had an interesting career in this city and went through a distinguished course in Creighton university, where he was valedictorian of his class at his graduation. He is popular among his friends and was a personal friend of the late Count Creighton, who took a fatherly interest in him. During his career in Omaha he was distinguished as an accomplished student in literary, dramatic and musical programs and no Catholic church entertainment was considered complete that did not have an item from D. J. Hurley. And it was his invariable rule never to accept remuneration for his contributions.

Besides his association with Creighton university, Father Hurley has been closely identified with Sacred Heart parish and is a close personal friend of the pastor, Father Judge. After his ordination in Kenrick seminary, St. Louis, on Friday by Archbishop Glennon, he will come direct to Omaha as a guest of Father Judge. Archbishop Glennon, considering him a very desirable aspirant to the priesthood, adopted him into his diocese two years ago. After giving him a few months' vacation to recuperate and rest the archbishop will assign him to special work in St. Louis.

Father Hurley's friends have planned to surprise him with a complimentary testimonial in the form of a purse. This feature is in charge of this committee: P. C. Healey, John Halpin and Paul C. Martin. For the occasion an interesting program will be rendered in Sacred Heart parish hall on Sunday evening.

Wedding Outfit is Missing

Clothes in Which Tekamah Man Was to Marry Taken by His Friends.

Dick Houston's wedding will have to be postponed, or else he will have to be married in borrowed clothes, or some bunch of tailors will have to work all night, for Dick's clothes are missing and this is the way it happened.

Richard Houston of Tekamah, left that thriving village Thursday morning to go to Indianapolis to be married. Many kind friends accompanied him to the station. Now he wishes they had not done so. Knowing they could not be present at the wedding or at the feast afterward, these youthful friends removed the contents of Houston's two grips and filled the grips with kindling wood and brick bats. Houston noticed the substitution just as he was leaving the Merchants hotel for his train. He is up a stump.

Did Pretty Ankle Sway the Jury?

That is a Question that Has Arisen in District Court Since Certain Criminal Trial.

Whether a pretty young woman's ankle or a young woman's pretty ankle might have an undue effect in influencing a jury is a burning theme in the Douglas county court house.

During a comparatively recent criminal trial the jury in the defendant's argument had a young woman who, by crossing her knees, carefully showed an inch or two of ankle, clad in a bright, silken stocking. Since several jurors kept their eyes glued on the said ankle, though perhaps devoting their ears to the witnesses, the question has arisen whether this had an influence on the verdict.

The question will not, however, be officially discussed, for the ankle was not an official "exhibit."

IOWA GRAIN DEALERS DINE AT FIELD CLUB LAST NIGHT

Turner Brothers of Iowa Will Be Guests of Some Fifty Omaha Men.

Turner Brothers, Iowa grain dealers who often dine at the Field club, were in state, were guests of some fifty Omaha grain dealers at the Field club last night.

While the grain dealers of Omaha had had a "sort" of annual dinner at one of the country clubs each year, the Turner Brothers are special guests at the dinner this evening, considered as also the annual event.

Ed Peck of the Peavey company was acting toastmaster and the toasts were informal.

Incidentally the Iowa grain firm is looking over Omaha with an idea of establishing headquarters in this city, which would mean the erection of another large terminal elevator at once. The only other city considered is Red Oak, Ia., and the advantage of being located at a primary market with some 2,700 miles of railroad serving it directly, is said to overbalance anything any city in Iowa could offer. Iowa has no primary grain market within the borders of the state except such as are created by the Omaha market in Council Bluffs and Missouri Valley.

BELLEVUE CLOSES ITS YEAR

Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston Addresses Graduating Class. CHRIST AS THE GREATEST FACT

Colorado Clergyman Speaks on "The Scientific Character of Christian Faith"—President's Reception Final Event.

The graduating class of Bellevue college were honored in the commencement exercises at the Presbyterian church of Bellevue, Thursday morning by an elaborate program consisting of musical numbers, orations by honor graduates and an address by Rev. Howard Agnew Johnston of Colorado Springs, was pronounced the most remarkable in many years. Dr. Johnston spoke on "The Scientific Character of the Christian Faith."

The graduates are: Bachelor of Arts—Milošav Filip, Omaha; Lulu Kissinger, Osmond; Bertha Haxfeld, Pawnee; William Vernon McCormack, Omaha; Lena Alberta O'Kane, Ithaca. Bachelor of Science—Leon Rex Carey, Bancroft; Pearl Kissinger, Osmond; Leigh Duncan Ohman, Pilger.

Bachelor of Philosophy—Charles Grover Graves, Fort Crook; Hartwell Hastings Hamblin, Tekamah; Myrtle Elizabeth Hunter, Lebanon; James Guy Phelps, Belmont; Abbie May Robertson, Atkinson. Honor Students—Myrtle Elizabeth Hunter, Lena Alberta O'Kane, James Guy Phelps, Bertha Haxfeld, Lulu Kissinger, Leigh Duncan Ohman, and me.

"In every object of human experience," said he "there is a scientific method of observation. Unscientific experimentation leads to wrong conclusions. It is necessary to consider first the fact and then the mystery, which is inseparably connected with every fact in experience. All scientists keep close to the fact in their research and they never think of denying the fact of experience, because they cannot understand the mystery."

Christ and the Mystery. Following this introduction, the doctor gave a scholarly address of forty minutes showing that the most stupendous fact of history was Christ, and that the mystery of the spiritual was not greater than the commonly accepted mysteries of science.

"We have implicit faith in the atom, the molecule, in electricity, light and sound theories but in scientific faith, nothing more. They cannot be demonstrated in their innate qualities. It is just as scientific to believe in the great fact and mystery of Christ as in the great facts and mysteries of science."

Leigh Duncan Ohman's oration on the "Changing Vision" had to do with the present day conception of greatness as opposed to the earlier conquerors of men the later aggrandizement of nations or the recent amassing of fortune. The conception of greatness for the future must include the greatest service.

The oration of Miss Myrtle Elizabeth Hunter expressed a hopeful outlook for the future of women. She said that the division of labor which modern machinery has brought about has given women more liberty to engage in duties not included in the home.

Hartwell Hastings Hamblin's solo, "Song of the Tormentor," by Blisset, was much appreciated.

After the program the degrees were conferred. A number of honorary degrees were issued as follows: Melvin V. Higby, D. D.; J. H. Clark, New York, L. L. D.; Leon D. Young, Beatrice, D. D.; N. P. McClure, Council Bluffs, D. D.; Thomas G. Sykes, Des Moines, D. D.; Harry Austin Carnahan, Anacostis, Mont., D. D.; H. E. Clarke, founder of the institution, L. L. D.

All the graduates with the exception of Messrs. Philip and Ohman, received teachers' certificates.

BOYS WHO GOT TIP TESTIFY

Brown Park School Children Flock to Grand Jury Room. WHAT THEY KNOW OF ROBBERS

Should Indictments Be Returned Against the Alleged Bandits Uncle Sam Will Push Their Trial with Haste.

The corridors of the federal building suggest a holiday vacation for Brown Park school, owing to the presence of the dozen or more pupils of that school summoned as witnesses in the big mail robbery case, the youngsters being the parties whose discoveries of the pistols, masks, ammunition, and other paraphernalia of the robbers brought about their arrest.

Several of the boys were before the grand jury Thursday morning giving their evidence. The accused men, Gordon, Woods and Torgensen, were taken to the federal building Wednesday afternoon under guard to be identified by a number of the out-of-town witnesses prior to their testimony before the grand jury.

About twenty witnesses have thus far been examined. It is believed by the federal authorities that the hearing will be finished by Saturday evening. Should indictments be returned it is the determination of the government to push the case to a speedy trial.

The preliminary hearing of Jack Shelton, the Denver suspect, will be held before United States Commissioner Anderson Monday. There is still a strong conviction with the federal authorities that there is a fifth man connected with the holdup of the Overland Limited and they are relaxing no efforts to land him if possible.
