MR. BROWN'S AUTO.

Verna Kirschbaun, Aged 13 years, 511 South Twenty-fourth street, Omaha, Neb., daughter of Mrs. Charles Kirsch-baun, Seventh grade, Central school, Miss Robinson, teacher. Robinson, teacher. FOR SALE-Fine electric automobile, almost new; bargain. — Douglas — "Do you keep electric automobiles here?" asked Mr. Brown. He was talking to the owner of an automobile garage, and was explaining how he happened to want one. "You see, I am a farmer," he said, "and as I am generally working all day I thought it would be nice for my wife to have something to do when I'm away." "I'll show you an automobile," he said, "and you can see if you'll like it." He showed him many kinds, and as Mr. Brown was very anxious to buy one it did not take him long to decide which one he wanted. "We had better teach you how to run ft." the man told him, "and then you can show your wife how." The man took him out the next day to teach him how to run the automobile, and he had been teaching him fifteen minutes when Mr. Brown said suddenly: "My home is only about fifteen miles from here and I think I'll drive the automobile there my-

"I am sure something will happen," said the man, "because you have not practised enough." But Mr. Brown would not listen

He started for home the next day and at first nothing went wrong. Afterwards he saw a crowd in front of him and grew very frightened. He became so bewildered that he forgot where his brakes were and he could not stop it. Fortunately the people got out of his way, but still the automobile would not stop. He reached for the lever, thinking it was the brake, pushed it forward and then went faster than ever.

It went very fast and finaly went into a. tree, but it didn't damage the auto much. He went on with it, but by the time he reached home he had so much troube with it that he determined to sell it.

He put the ad in The Bee and the very next day a man came to look at it, and being satisfied with it he bought it. When the man was gone Mr. Brown gave a sigh of relief.

"Well, I'm giad its sold." he said, but his wife said: "Tve always told you never to buy anything that you can have accidents

"But" said Mr. Brown to himself. "If I had gotten it home all right she would have said it was fine."
