"I don't know where I am going to get another man when Joe Marshall leave me," thought the proprietor of the Sterling Meat company of Sterling, Colo. "Joe has just told me he is going to leave, to start into business for himself. I don't believe. I can get a man as good as Joe is. I must have a man to take Joe's place at once. Oh, I know what I will do. I will do what a friend of mine did. Put an ad in The Omaha Daily Bee. It will only cost me a few cents and may bring good results," so he put the above add in The Bec.

Work was rather unsteady in the packing houses, having only made thirty-nine hours the last week and, as a consequence, small wages. Charley Smith looked over the ads in The Omaha Bee and saw the ad of the Sterling Meat company. "That is just the job for me," said Charley. He had worked in the packing house since he was a boy, at all different kinds of work and thoroughly understood meat cutting. He decided he would write to the Sterling Meat company at once. The Sterling Meat company received his letter and selected him for the vacancy left by Joe Marshall. In time he proved he was every bit as good at Joe in every way and so parties were all satisfied through the use of a few cents and a little HOGS—All holiday markets look alike and it is a waste of lime and trouble to attempt writing a description of the day's trade. Anyone who has ever been on a market on a holiday can imagine the prevailing conditions without the necessity of reading a description. A few buyers wanted a very few hogs and they paid prices around 5610 higher than last week's close, but the damand was extremely limited and the market very dull from strat to finish, especially at the finish when it was a very difficult matter to get better than steady prices on the light or less desirable loads that the early buyers did not take. The better grades sold largely at $1.097.80 and on up as high as $7.50 for the best heavy. This latter price is the highest paid so far this year and the first time that it has been paid for a full load.

SHEEP—Grassfed muttons commanded prices steady to a dime higher this morning. Receipts were moderate, consisting wholly of ratige stock from Idano and Oregon. The trade was reasonably active from the opening and the general market exhibited more life than it has for some time, which only indicates that the best market predictions are sometimes little better than wild guesses.

A couple of week's ago, mutton experts producted an improved demand prior to the Fourth of hilly. As will be remembered, precedent received a severe joit during the past two weeks and the sheep trade et all the leading markets has been practically demoralized. Following up at the heels of this prediction came the prophecy that independence day mutton would get bumped hard. At least at the point, the latter prediction has also gone awry. All of which indicates the perversity of mutton trade and the unreliability of market dope.

Dun's Report of Clearings.

Bank clearings for June exhibit a considerable gain over the preceding months this year, notwithstanding it is the season when business transactions are naturally reduced, while the increase ever the corresponding period in any preceding year is phenomenal. The increase at New York was accountuated by the broadened speculative activity on the Stock Exchange, but the very large returns from nearly all points outside this city testify to a most satisfactory volume of business. Total exchanges for the month, seconding to the statement issued by R. G. Don & Co., for all cities reporting in the United States, embracing 116 leading centers, were $14.064.414,046, an increase of 43.3 per cent. over the figures of last year and of 14.6 per cent, as compared with 1906. There are comparatively few points that do not participate in this increase. In the Middle Atlantic States, Philadelphia and Pittsburg make a favorable comparison with last year, but the returns are smaller than in 1907 and 1906 on account of the depression re the iron market, although conditions in that respect. are rapidly improving and will probably soon be normal. Hoston, Harnford, New Haven and some other New England cities make gratifying increases, while in the West there is remarkable improvement at Chicago, Milwaukos, Indianapolia, Detroit, Kansas City. St. Paul, Omaha and almost every other point over last year and in most instances over 1906. In the South Atlantic States, improvement is still maintained at Baltimere, Richmond and Atlanta, the galu at the latter being very large. St. Louis, Memphis and many other points in the Middle South make large gains, but at New Orleans and some other Southern cities there are still losses. There is a large volume of exchanges on the Pacific coast, and all sities help to swell the increase. Comparison is made below of bank exchanges by sections covering three years; also the average daily figures for the year to date:
