done by nations before us, under conditions that seemed to limit the possibility of human achievement, but were overcome by the bravery, the courage and the religious faith of nations that preceded us in developing the world.

There were Montcalm and Wolfe, two great Christians, back to whom you trace the whole history of lower Canada. It is true Wolfe conquered Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, but there is still in all the region of lower Canada a population purely French, a population industrious, God-fearing and loyal to the flag under whose government they live.

For sixteen years it was my good fortune to go to Murray Bay in Canada for the summer. There is a limitation, however, upon the presidential office that now prevents. While there I learned some things, and one was while the Murray Highlanders and other soldiers of England conquered on the plains of Abraham, quite a number of those soldiers went down the St. Lawrence and were induced to settle on the French Seigniories, which lie some eighty miles below Quebec.

There were Blackburns and Warrens and Macneils and Fraziers and Nairns and all the Scotch names that bring back the memory of the Murray Highlanders. And what did they do? They had the good sense to marry French women. And what happened? That country is full of Blackburns and Fraziers and Macneils and Warrens and Nairns today, and they don't any of them speak a word of English. There are other ways of conquering a people than merely by guns.

History of Valley. "This valley, in the 300 years since it was discovered by Champlain, has furnished almost as much of battle ground for the three nations and the Indians who were on all sides as Belgium in Europe, and one does not have to look far for the reason. If you will read the account given by Benedict Arnold of his attempt to reach Quebec through Maine you will understand why everybody that went that way went by Lake Champlain. The truth is that it was the only passageway and here were fought the battles, continued for 300 years, and, as we now say, never to recur again.

In the civil war I believe there was a little adventure by some rash representatives of the confederacy, who tried to break a bank in St. Albans, but with that exception we have to go back to the war of 1812 for the use of this as a battle ground.

I echo and emphasize the statements of the two ambassadors and repeat their prayers that never again may this great valley be given a name in history by reason of its being the seat of bloody war.

Governor Hughes and Governor Prouty of Vermont spoke briefly at Concord, where the Indian pagent was repeated tonight. The president will not see this pagent until he arrives at Burlington on Thursday.

President Taft thought for a time today of returning to Beverly from Burlington to spend Friday, Saturday and Sunday at his summer home with Mrs. Taft, but later decided to adhere to his original schedule and return Friday to Washington, reaching there late Friday afternoon.

Jeff, Jr., Causes Absence. Arkansas Senator Explains Why He Was Not at White House Dinner.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—As one father to another, Senator Jeff Davis of Arkansas explains to President Taft, in a letter made public today, that his failure to attend the White House dinner the other night at the president's invitation was due not to intentional discourtesy, but to his pursuit of his 12-year-old son, who went to Fort Myer to see the aeroplane fly and did not return.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Earl J. Litterer, assistant cashier of the Security National bank here, this afternoon shot down and fatally wounded A. G. Hudson, a negro, on Broadway, in the business district. The negro had been charged with forgery and fled from the bank with Litterer after him.

Hudson, it is said, had passed forged checks on the bank a few days ago. He was expected to return, and when he came in today Litterer attempted to detain him while an officer was secretly summoned. Hudson became suspicious and ran, followed by the teller, who commanded him to halt, but the commands were unheeded. He then shot the negro.

WIT OF HOUSE IS DEAD

Representative Cushman Succumbs in New York Hospital.

NOTABLE FIGURE IN DEBATE

Fund of Humor and Ability as a Speaker Gave Him Attentive Audience When He Rose to Speak.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Francis W. Cushman, representative in congress from Tacoma, Wash., died at 5 o'clock this morning in Roosevelt hospital from pneumonia.

At his bedside at the time were, besides the doctors and nurses, United States Senator Arthur H. Hays of Washington and Andrew S. Burchell of this city, a life-long friend.

Congressman Cushman underwent an operation a short time ago and pneumonia resulted. The body will be sent to Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—While Representative Cushman possessed unchallenged the title of "house humorist," he was universally regarded as far more than that.

His high ability was recognized by Speaker Cannon, his committee assignments, particularly in his selection to fill a vacancy on the ways and means committee at a time when a great tariff bill was to be reported to the house for consideration.

The Washington congressman was said to have looked more like Lincoln than any other public man of recent years. In summing up his career once, he said he had been a water boy, a cowboy, school teacher, lawyer and congressman. He was in congress for more than ten years.

Cushman's body, wrapped in an American flag, will be put aboard the Chicago Limited of the Pennsylvania railroad at New York tomorrow morning, and will be taken direct to Tacoma, in charge of Frederick M. Weber, deputy sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives.

The congressional election of his membership will carry the body to its destination will board the train at Pittsburg.

CUSHMAN FORMER NEBRASKAN

Dead Congressman Practiced in This State Before Going to Washington.

Congressman Cushman, who has just died in New York, was a citizen of Nebraska, for two or three years before he took his departure for Washington, where he was destined to become one of the leading public men of the coast state and to be its best United States congressman for twelve years.

It was as a young lawyer, fresh from college, that Cushman came to Nebraska in the middle '80s and took up his residence in the western part of the state. He set up an office in a small way and started in to build up a reputation as a practicing lawyer. He was popular with the broad-minded people of this state and his clients were many.

Several of young Cushman's cases were tried before Judge Kinsaid, who liked the manner in which the young attorney presented his arguments and the two became personal friends. After he had become a member of the lower house from Washington, Cushman often recalled his experiences with Judge Kinsaid in the western part of Nebraska.

Ex-Congressman John L. Kennedy during his term in the house of representatives became a personal friend of Congressman Cushman. He was deeply moved when he learned of the Washington representative's death.

"Cushman was one of the most popular members of the lower house," said Mr. Kennedy, in recalling his memories of the late congressman. He was honest, trusted by all, and as fearless as any man I knew in congress. His wit was of the Abraham Lincoln type. It was always homely and keen. He was no great orator and often was crude in his speech, but he had a keen satire and could reach a desired point in a most forcible way. His wit made him an excellent after-dinner speaker and he was often in great demand.

He once tried to get him to come to Omaha for a banquet, but he was kept busy by his business interests.

"His satire was plainly brought out in connection with a speech made by Congressman Charles A. Towne, formerly of Minnesota, but now of New York. Congressman Towne had made a brilliant oratorical speech which had impressed the whole house. It was, indeed, one of the best speeches Towne ever delivered in the house, and was a strong delivery in the democratic fight in congress. Congressman Cushman rose slowly from his seat and in a roll manner addressed the speaker and then made the following remarks:

"I have been charmed by the speech of the gentleman from New York. It is the best talk I have heard him make. I envy him his well modulated voice. It is a silvery ring, and there is only one way, Mr. Speaker, that one man's voice can be heard in the chamber of congress. It is to be heard on the part of the speaker, and that, Mr. Speaker, must be in speaking on every side of every question."

DUTY OF SCHOOL TO CITIZENSHIP

with its variety of race types, affords opportunity to discover what racial traits are inborn, and how they may be inhibited or fostered by education. Our Kamehameha schools in Honolulu showed youths with like environment and privileged ruled largely by the impulses: their Hawaiian or Caucasian or Mongolian blood.

White Schools and Black. "A fundamental distinction is in the point at which intellectual development is arrested. The mass of the 'child race' cease to grow intellectually, much earlier than the mass of Caucasians. It is absurd to theorize about the propriety of college education for the mass of Negroes or Indians or Filipinos or Hawaiians. They lack the intellect to acquire it."

"This is true to a smaller extent of the mass of Caucasians. The scholar is the flower of civilization, born, rather than made. When we get a scholar, we do not know what to do with him. And yet the curricula of our schools provide mainly for the development of scholars.

"Much more wisdom is shown in the best schools for other races, which are being fitted to exist in the white man's world. The rearing of children of any race, while demanding improvement of conditions, demands also preparation to meet existing conditions. The white man's curriculum is dominated by knowledge of natural law, obedience to social control, deliverance from malevolent deities, and the ideals of democracy. Essential to the education of any child, therefore, are: nature study in its broadest sense; home arts and industries, culminating in vocational training; moral regulation of personal and social life, and such aesthetics as make for personal happiness and self respect."

To Train Captains of Industry. "To provide an institution of university grade for the training of leaders of trade and captains of industry, with expert teachers of business culture, ethics, history, applications of the sciences, world markets, etc., is a larger opportunity for some philanthropist than the endowment of libraries or the establishment of chairs in dead language, or the search for numismatics and so forth that are still more dead," said S. R. Hoover, an educator of Cleveland, O., speaking before the department of business education at the National association convention today.

"For centuries the business man has helped to educate all the other professions, and supported them afterward," continued Mr. Hoover. "Now the dignity of his own, the incomparably larger number engaged in it, and the keenness of the competition with those other lands demand a departure from our archaic system of learning business methods.

For the professional there must be special training. The physician, lawyer, minister, teacher, engineer and athlete have presented their claims and recognition accorded in special opportunity provided by schools of the most approved type. But it has been generally true of the history of education that as soon as the boy showed his inclination toward a commercial career, he was sidetracked with scant courtesy and only a rudimentary training in the mere 'hatch-and-saw' course."

Would Eliminate Degeneracy. "The English problem of how to eliminate 'Hooligans' does not yet confront us seriously, but intelligent and systematic action along well defined lines covering the whole country through the common school is necessary to prevent a degenerate class, the individual of which has been aptly described as too heavy for light work and too light for heavy work," said S. Wessells, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in an address at a department meeting of the National Education association today.

"It is time," the speaker continued, "that the child was treated as a unit by other than standard methods and subjected to a scientific inquiry both from the physiologists and the pathologists of the mind. This inquiry should be employed by the state and sent to all communities and conduct the examinations necessary to inform the local school boards of the exact condition of every pupil reported delinquent and backward in grade work.

MAY BLOCK PANAMA CASE

French Procedure Not Favorable to Eliciting of Information.

ATTORNEY WISE NOW IN PARIS

Fear of Reopening Ancient Scandal, Which Almost Wrecked French Government, Actuates Officials.

PARIS, July 6.—Henry A. Wise, United States district attorney at New York, and Stuart McNamara, assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia, who were sent here as a special committee to obtain testimony in the Panama canal case, have reached Paris, but can do nothing until the arrival of Delaney Nicoll and John D. Lindsay, counsel for the Press Publishing company, publishers of the New York World.

The prospects of the commission's gaining much information are anything but bright, as the path is blocked with numerous obstacles. The consent of the French government, which is not based upon treaty stipulations, but is a mere act of courtesy, has not yet been obtained, the government having replied to the American embassy's communication that the list of witnesses and the questions to be asked must first be submitted to the minister of justice, who shall decide whether it will be possible to comply with the request.

The position of the French government is extremely delicate. The old Panama scandal, which wrecked so many fortunes and reputations and brought the country almost to the verge of a revolution, is now legally closed, and no matter how willing the government might be to accede to the American request, it would probably hesitate if such action involved the slightest risk of reopening the old question.

Even should a favorable response be given, the French, and not the American, procedure would doubtless be followed. Judge Ditta, president of the tribunal of first instance of the Seine, would nominate a judge, before whom the witnesses must appear to answer questions previously drawn up. No cross-examination or new line of evidence is possible under the French system in such cases. Moreover, neither the attendance of witnesses nor their giving of testimony is compulsory. Witnesses would simply be called to appear by a bailiff and could refuse to answer on the flimsiest pretext without penalty. The question of documents and papers which the defense attorneys desire to examine presents even greater difficulties, as subpoenas, such as are issued in the United States, are unknown in France.

Arts College Criticized

The American College of Liberal Arts has lamentably failed as a popular institution of higher education in that it attracts less than 1 per cent of our young men and women, but one-tenth of 1 per cent of the population. It has permitted various institutions, notably correspondence schools, private business schools, industrial and agricultural schools to usurp its function because of liberality."

So declared Prof. Samuel Wendell Williston of the University of Chicago at a meeting today of the department of higher education, held in connection with the convention of the National Education association. "It has lost discipline, both mental and moral," continued the speaker, "and the charge is freely made, and in a great measure truthfully, that a very large proportion of its students are seeking merely the diploma rather than an education which will fit them for higher pursuits in life; who work, upon an average, but three or four hours daily, and who acquire habits neither of industry nor application; that there has been a decided lowering of the moral standard among college students; that upon the whole a bachelor degree is losing its significance as an indication of fitness for most of the pursuits of life.

"Undeniably the college has lost discipline by the general adoption of the system of electives, which leaves so much to the caprice and unintelligent choice of the inexperienced student. There has been, also, a demoralization of the student body as a result of the rivalry among institutions, especially the state institutions, for numbers; institutions are still for the most part gauged by their size rather than by their product. Furthermore, the elective system has lowered the discipline by the rivalry among the different teachers in the same institutions for large classes, with the development of soft courses—concessions to the all too obvious inclinations of most students to seek the easiest way to their diploma, with little regard for the value of the work accomplished.

"Whenever every pupil who leaves the disciplinary high school is compelled to choose a definite course of study leading to some definite end, and not be permitted to spend four years more in aimless work, the problem of the American college is solved, and the diploma is not until then," said Prof. Williston, in conclusion.
