CONTRACT LET FOR HILL LINE

Second Wyoming Burlington Will Be Built by McArthurs.

TO COST THREE OR FOUR MILLION

This Will Establish Link Between Lines Across Wyoming and Around Omaha Greater Outlet to Northwest.

The Burlington has let the contract for building the expensive line from Kirby to a point west of Shoshoni, Wyo., through the Big Horn gorge. The successful bidder is McArthur Bros., the large contracting firm which recently bought out Kipatrik Bros. & Collins and more recently established headquarters in the McCasus block in Omaha.

The cost of this line will be between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, making it one of the most expensive pieces of railroad work in the west. This great expense is caused in a large measure by the fact that for eleven miles through the Big Horn gorge the line will have to be cut along the ledge of almost perpendicular rocks far enough above the water of the river that it may cross the Boyesen dam now installed at the entrance to the gorge.

The awarding of this contract means a great deal more than a mere short line in central Wyoming; it establishes a connecting link between the Burlington lines of the Big Horn basin and the Burlington lines in southern Wyoming. It means a second low-grade line for the Burlington across the state of Wyoming and a second line from Omaha to the great northwest. While the contract calls for building the line only as far south as a point west of Shoshoni to meet the Northwestern line from Lander east it is more than probable that a working agreement will be made with the Northwestern whereby the Burlington will use the Northwestern from Shoshoni to Orin Junction until such time as the Burlington can build a line of its own.

One Line Overcrowded.—The Burlington at present has more business than can be well handled over its single track road from Omaha to Billings and the second line is a necessity, because of the large volume of business which has been added by reason of the new connection of the Burlington with the Great Northern at Billings by the Great Falls cut-off.

The new line will open up one of the greatest health resorts in the world. The waters of Thermopoli are already famed and when they are made accessible by the new road they are sure to become popular. A new sanitarium has already been built at Thermopoli where the hot waters boil from the ground.

Orin Junction is the point where the Colorado & Southern now connects with the Northwestern. The Colorado & Southern is owned by the Burlington, but it has not been definitely decided whether the Burlington will build from Shoshoni to Orin Junction or to meet the Burlington at Orin Junction.

New York and Philadelphia cannot be more pleasantly or conveniently reached than by the Grand Trunk-Lehigh Valley double track route via Niagara Falls. Solid through trains of coaches and sleeping cars. Magnificent scenery.

Little Newsboy Sought in Vain

Ernest Scalzo Goes Swimming and is Not Seen Again by His People.

Where is Ernest Scalzo, an 11-year-old Italian lad who sells papers at Sixteenth and Harney streets? Neither his widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Scalzo, 101 South Twenty-third street, nor the police who have been working on the case know what has become of the newsboy. While most all the other "newsies" enjoyed themselves at the Lake Manawa picnic Ernest was searched for vainly.

Tuesday morning he is said to have gone swimming with some other boys and since then he has not been heard from. No information as to his whereabouts or what has happened to him has been secured by the police.

Girl Being Frozen to Combat Bad Case of Tetanus

Tina Gurkin is Kept in Chill Room of Brewery in Desperate Fight for Life.

In the most frigid chill room of Krug's brewery Tina Gurkin, 119 North Twenty-seventh street, Omaha, is fighting a precarious battle against tetanus or lockjaw. She is under the care of Dr. W. J. McCann of South Omaha, who was the first doctor on record to use the chill room treatment. This case developed from a slight cut on the foot from a piece of glass. It developed about a week after the injury and reached the critical stage Tuesday night. The Omaha physicians referred to Dr. McCann and he visited the patient in the night.

He placed her in the chill room, where the temperature is below freezing all the time, and the usual serum treatment of the physicians is continued. His theory is that cold aids in the recovery of the vitality. After being in the chill room two hours the girl's jaws had begun to relax. The doctor expresses hope of recovery if the case has not been put off too long. It is the second case the doctor has treated in this way.

Shave Costs Ten Dollars

Minneapolis Man Tells What Auto Ordinance Did to a Friend of His.

"I see you have no ordinance forbidding auto standing in the streets," said George N. Hoaglin, one of the Minneapolis real estate men in the city. "But you do not need it as much as Minneapolis, for your streets are wider."

"The other day a friend of mine came down town and thought he'd get a shave before putting his car in the garage. He had to wait for a chair and more than twenty minutes elapsed—the time which cars may stand. That shave cost him $10.15, of which 15 cents went to the barber and $10 to the city."

"The ordinance is a good one in some respects," but Nicollet avenue does seem empty without any cars."

MURDER CHARGE FOR HENRY

Young Man Technically Held by Coroner's Jury at Inquest.

TWO SAY THEY SAW SHOT FIRED

Accused is Still at Large and with Him is Believed to Be J. W. Stringer, Wanted as a Witness.

Frank L. Henry, though still at large and defying the skill of Omaha police, is held on the charge of murder in the first degree by the verdict of the coroner's jury that conducted the inquest into the death of Maud Henry.

Lettitia Clayton, 1416 Leavenworth street, colored, and Charles H. Johnson, 322 South Twentieth street, white, testified that they saw Henry kill his wife. Johnson is the man who gave chase when Henry fled from the scene. He testified Henry fired five shots.

Johnson, a teamster for the Merchants Transfer company, gave this testimony: "I was standing at Fourteenth and Leavenworth when I heard some quarreling and walked down between Fifteenth and sixteenth on Leavenworth. I found the quarreling was at 600 South Fifteenth street and then I heard three shots fired, and saw a woman fall on the porch in the rear of this house. Henry ran away from that porch with the pistol in his hand. He went down Fifteenth and disappeared in the alley next to Sixteenth street. I, with Galloway, Henry's brother-in-law, and a man named Gardner, ran after Henry, who then fired two more shots in the direction of the rear porch. We could not catch Henry."

Lettitia Clayton, a laundress, said: "I was rocking a baby on the porch at 1416 Leavenworth, where I work, and when I saw an altercation between a man and a woman over at this house (indicating the house at 603 South Fifteenth), I ran out and then I saw Henry slap his wife in the face. Soon he fired two shots at her and she fell on the porch. He pulled the gun from his pocket, and after he had shot her ran away and while he ran put the pistol back in his pocket. He ran northward on Fifteenth street."

The man, J. W. Stringer, who also is said to have seen Henry shoot the woman, did not appear at the inquest, nor has he yet been found. The police still believe he may be the companion of Henry in his boat that drifted off leisurely down the river, affording the alleged murderer a means of escape from the officers.

Speculation is rife concerning Stringer's disappearance. The police declare he will be put in jail if caught, as it is believed he may be able to give valuable testimony against Henry, and at least can swear that he saw the man shoot Mrs. Henry.

Stringer lived at 908 North Eighteenth street, just six blocks north of Henry's home. He is a painter by trade and was working for a second-hand dealer named Simon until he disappeared. Numerous inquiries for him at his room and place of work failed to give any trace of him, and it is said that he has not been seen by acquaintances since Monday.
