A Story of Unusual Merit

LETTERS WHICH TELL A STORY.

By Grace Isabel Ross, Blair, Neb. Father, Mr. Charles Ross, seventh grade, Central school; teacher, Miss Bruckner. Aged 13.

TWO nicely furnished rooms, all modern. Dodge St.

Robert Dryden, a young man, was taking a course in a summer college in a city some distance from his home. His mother was a widow, her husband having died when Robert was a tiny baby.

One morning Robert received a letter from his mother, which read as follows:

"My Dear Robert:

"Mr. Johnson, who, you know, with his wife, rents two rooms from me, came to me this morning with the news that he had been offered a fine position in Chicago, and would be leaving Omaha as soon as possible. This was not very pleasant news to me certainly, for you know many of your expenses were paid by the money received for rent. But I shall do my best to get another lodger soon. I shall put an advertisement in The Bee to this effect: 'Two nicely furnished rooms. All modern.'

"I shall write when I have been successful in getting a lodger.

"Your loving mother,

"ALICE DRYDEN."

In about a week he received another letter.

"Dear Son:

"I have had good luck in securing a lodger. Several people came to look at the rooms, but none were suited until one afternoon a good looking, middle aged gentleman knocked at the door and asked to see the rooms. I showed them to him and he seemed very well pleased with them and engaged them at once.

"His name is Mr. John Denny. He is a bachelor. I like him very well because he is so quiet and gentlemanly.

"Your loving mother,

"ALICE DRYDEN."

After a series of letters from his mother, in which the new lodger was very frequently mentioned, Robert received a letter from her which surprised him not a little. It was literally overflowing with happiness. A photograph accompanied it.

"You must congratulate your dear, old mammy. What do you suppose has happened to her? Well, our lodger, Mr. Denny, has made a permanent agreement with her and he is to be a lodger in her heart forever.

"What I mean is, that you, who never knew a father, will have one whom I know you will love very much. He is so good and kind that I know you can not help loving him.

"I am so happy, and I know you will be happy, too, when you become acquainted with your new father. He sends his love and best wishes. What beautiful blessings have come to me from that one little advertisement in The Bee!

"From your very happy mother,

"ALICE DRYDEN."
