SLICK WAYS OF SMUGGLERS

Variations in the Game of Beating the Customs House.

SHADY TRICKS OF THE TRADE

People of Repute Conspire to Cheat the Government—Methods Observed and Suppressed by Inspectors.

New methods of smuggling multiply as rapidly as Barnum's supply of fools. Custom house inspectors at the port of New York, find them almost as numerous as the passengers they deal with.

Of the many forms of systematic smuggling, one of the most prevalent is that of the English tailor who comes to this country with samples and takes measurements and orders for English clothes and haberdashery. The orders and measurements are sent back to the establishments in London. Invariably they ask instructions for shipping, saying that if the customer has friends coming over from England by whom they can send the suit, duty will be saved. One firm formerly undertook to get the goods delivered free of duty, relying on various stewards and other employees of the steamers on which the representative crossed to get them across for an extra charge of perhaps $1 on each suit. One steward who practiced this custom of delivering goods in Boston to several customers of the firm made a tidy sum, for he occasionally risked bringing in as many as two suits on each trip, and perhaps an ulster or overcoat, which he would put on and wear. He was of medium size, and it was his practice to put on the new suit under a loose suit of his own and wear it off the steamer to deliver it to the customer from his own person. This was carried on several years, and it is not known that the steward was ever detected or that he is not doing it still. "I know it's not right," he said, "but when a man has a family and a lot of kiddies to feed, well, it's easy money."

Household Furnishings.
 A number of systematic smuggling is not really smuggling, yet is ethically, when it is done with intent to defraud. For instance, an American widow with two attractive daughters went to Paris and Dresden to live for a year or two, to complete the usual education of the girls. Her proposition was made to her by a dealer in her own city, who asked her if she wanted to clear her expenses while on the trip abroad. "If you are willing to remain long enough to establish a residence in Europe," he said, "this will be easy." To make a long story short, the woman sailed into the port of Boston one fair day, radiant and excited over getting back to her home again after her two years' exile. When her luggage was taken from the steamer she had boxes upon boxes packed full of antique furniture, Oriental rugs, pictures and bric-a-brac enough to stock a small store. The furniture of her apartment, as she truly said, she had remained, and it was subsequently found that often cases of farming implements were put on the steamer in the name of a traveler and taken away by agents of the company on this side. The French line has made it a rule that no luggage shall be received on one of its steamers unless accompanied by the passenger, and other lines will doubtless follow suit.

of any variety are forbidden access to the piers by order of the surveyor of the port and this form of smuggling is ended.

One of the inspectors at the custom house declares that fully 85 per cent of the coral jewelry brought into this country is smuggled, mostly from Italy, and that all sorts and conditions of people are engaged in smuggling this and the long kid gloves with which the markets were flooded not long ago. Entire families of Italians living in Brooklyn and Manhattan tenement houses have made their living in the smuggling of gloves. A tip received a few weeks ago at the custom house sent a searching party to a Brooklyn tenement house, where, after a thorough search of several apartments, nothing was found. It was thought that the tip was a false one, and the detectives started to go. One of them, in leaving a gesture to him that it might be worth while to look under that board. He did so, and found gloves to the value of $4,000 or $7,000 secreted under the floor.

A Shattered System.
 A recent smuggling case which has not yet been made public was that done by a reputable Austrian concern which imports farming tools. One of the steamer passengers on a certain German steamer was found to have very heavy luggage, which, upon being examined, was found to contain steel blades for scythes and moving machines—his "personal baggage," he said. It was found at the examination that this company had been doing systematic smuggling in this manner, merely evading the payment of duty, but cheating the steamship companies out of their freight. The passenger protested that he "did not know the bag was his," and it was subsequently found that often cases of farming implements were put on the steamer in the name of a traveler and taken away by agents of the company on this side. The French line has made it a rule that no luggage shall be received on one of its steamers unless accompanied by the passenger, and other lines will doubtless follow suit.

Musings of a Cynic.
 Even a clear profit may be under a cloud. It takes a woman of great strength to hold her tongue. All women are riddles, but some of them are rather plain. Many a woman's laugh is simply a display of dimples and dentistry. You can always tell a dyspeptic by the nature had intended him for an old maid. In spite of the fact that a girl is given to her a lot of these throat throbs, she is always away.

Some people only hope for the best under protest, and are disappointed if it happens. You can always tell a dyspeptic by the profound hatred he exhibits toward the people who are enjoying themselves.

Anterior pride is the safest thing in the world. Our ancestors are too dead to kick about the liberties we take with them.—New York Times.

A Miracle.
 John J. McGraw, the base ball expert, went at a banquet in New York the marvelous attributes of the spitball. "It's a good ball," he said. "It fools the best of them. But when I hear some of the fellows brag about it, I think of Harriet Hare of Frisco." "I once read in a Frisco paper," Harriet Hare of Nob Hill got a needle in her waist two years ago, and only last week this needle worked its way out of the arm of a young Los Angeles rose farmer."—St. Louis Globe.

Peddlers Caught in the Act.
 A frequent form of smuggling has only just been stopped by the custom house officials. It was a simple one and had been practiced for many years—just how long no one exactly knows—by the thousand and one peddlers of various nationalities who haunt the piers of the ocean steamers. It was their custom to go on the pier with their bundles, presumably containing wares to be bought by stewards and other persons on board the steamers. It was found that their bundles did not always contain handkerchiefs, needles, collar buttons and the other notions usually carried in stock by peddlers of this class, but that many of them were "fake" bundles, which they exchanged at the steamer or on the pier for other bundles given them by the seamen, containing dutiable goods. Now peddlers

 Authorized Details of the Coming One-Family Residence.

MOLDED HOUSES FOR MILLIONS
 Cheapness and Durability the Prime Consideration—Cost of Plant and Method of Pouring the Concrete.

Such newspaper comment and expert discussion regarding Edison's "poured concrete house" has been indulged in for over a year, most of it based on fragmentary information. The Cement World furnishes the needed details in an authorized interview with the "Wizard of Menlo Park." It is a full and complete story of the invention, with details of specifications, ornamentation, method of construction and estimated cost. The following general facts, shorn of technical details, are taken from the account:

"The most frequent objection, or criticism, offered was the apparent impracticability of pouring concrete into an intricate set of molds and securing a surface throughout that would be free from imperfections. 'It will clog,' it will not flow," were expressions heard on all sides. Then objections were offered on artistic grounds. 'Imagine a city of houses, every one of which was like all the others. It is preposterous,' was said.

All Critics Answered.
 Mr. Edison has answered all these objections to the full satisfaction of the most critical. Here are the important facts about the poured house which will be spoken of more in detail further on:

He has produced a mixture of a consistency almost like water which holds the stone or aggregate in suspension, allows the mixture to flow freely to all parts of the molds and secures a uniform distribution of the aggregate throughout the mass. The molds are adapted to variations of arrangement, thus making it possible to change the style of houses with the same set of molds. With five or six sets of molds, therefore, a wide variety of style is possible.

The model plan exhibited by Mr. Edison is for one family, with a floor plan 23x29 feet. It is intended to be built on lots 40x50 feet, giving lawn and small garden room.

The front porch extends eight feet and the back porch three feet.

On the first floor is a large front room 14x23 and nine and a half feet high, intended as a living room, and a kitchen in the back 14x20 and nine and a half feet high. In the corner of the front room is a wide staircase leading to the second floor. This contains two large bedrooms, a wide hall and a roomy bath room, 7 1/2x17 and eight feet two inches high.

The third floor has two large rooms.

Each room has large windows, so that there is an abundance of light and fresh air.

The cellar, seven feet six inches high, extends under the whole house and will contain the boiler, wash tubs and coal bunker. The main room, as well as the outside of the house, will be richly decorated.

The decorations will be cast with the house and will, therefore, be a part of the

TIRE GENTRY CAUSES WOE IN SOME COUNTRY TOWNS
 Letters shipped by Employment Bureau Classified as Undesirable Citizens.

Chief of Police Donahue has received letters from country towns complaining that Omaha employment bureaus are shipping idle citizens into their midst.

The chief has investigated and come to this conclusion: That the fellows apply for work in order to get a ride somewhere, and that when they reach their destination, they refuse to work and begin to make complaints, finally that the men and not the employment bureaus are to blame.

W. T. Elliott, city marshal of Brady, wrote a letter to the chief, saying men shipped out there to work for the contracting firm of McMeny & Mahoney, complained of overcharges by the labor agents and the latter's alleged failures to keep agreements. On those grounds the men refused to work, and became idle members of the community, of whom the town officials wanted to get rid.
