VACATION TIME.

Baltimore American. Likewise the woman who is self-support-

Pack my suit case, or my trunk, which is better And hie me to mountain or lakeside or ocean,
There, once forgetful of toll and of labor,

Loll and do nothing in elegant leisure, With naught more exacting than spend-ing of money, And so divine the habitual feeling

Of millionaires who are in the class multi-, No thoughts of care shall be there to oppress me. No business need to be filled in short order, No meddling boss to be giving directions, Novels I'll read by the manifold bushel, Enjoy the unusual, the luxury joyful, Of sleeping in peace far, far into the morning.

My days shall be full of content and of I'll take no regrets, no cares hard or dis-turbing, And I will meet none but most social of I'll wear my best clothes every day if I want to, And make an impression as though 'twas Oh, I'll cut a dash, but I'll be a bit pru-And take care I spend not the whole of my money.
But bring back a margin to start fair and even. Thus doth the delusion that's call a vaca-Spread out its visions, and, spite of their knowledge, Maketh the workers think all this will happen
And tell to themselves solemp tales that are fairy.
