Continuing Tariff Debate.

Senators Smoot and La Follette are continuing in the public press the debate on the tariff bill, which they began in the senate, but this discussion of the measure, or rather measures, outside the conference committee, is not a compromise between the house and senate bills it will be the first time in history that such has not been the case.

One thing brought out by Senator Smoot is worthy of more than passing attention, and that is that the increases from present rates made by the senate are largely upon luxuries such as wines, liquors, silks, diamonds, automobiles and similar classifications, which accords with those best able to bear it and keeps in view one of the essentials of a tariff, the production of revenue.

It will be time enough to analyze the rates in the bill when the measure is completed and not until then can an idea be obtained of its real relation to the existing tariff.

Sending Immigrants to Farms. The immigration commission, aided by several benevolent societies, is endeavoring to turn as many immigrants as possible from the cities to the farming sections.

Altogether Too Much. The prospect of a nearly 40 per cent increase in city taxes ought to arouse the people of Omaha to an immediate protest.

One of the evidences that Millionaire Snell was insane is that he offered to bet $10,000 on Bryan's election. This may not be conclusive, but it will help some.

Without entering into any discussion of the 8 o'clock closing law with the esteemed Globe-Democrat of St. Louis, we respectfully inform that paper that the National Saengerfest will meet in Omaha next year as planned despite the fallen lid.

Possibly the size of Argentina had something to do with bringing an apology.

A prominent German statesman has pointed out that should Germany and Great Britain engage in a war both would lose, as the United States would step in and capture the commercial supremacy of the world.

A Chicago minister has offered to wager $50 that Prof. Foster cannot give an acceptable definition of God. The professor would probably make a similar offer on condition that he be the judge of what is acceptable.

A can of milk which exploded in New Jersey fatally injured the driver of the wagon. Many a dairyman has been blown up before, but usually it is the good housewife who furnishes the explosive.

Mayor "Jim" is going to debate on the subject of prohibition with a woman chautauquan. He should get even with his opponent by challenging her to a roping contest.

Why Not Keep It Dark? Chicago News. How can one expect freight to move on the waterways when the railroads are snatching along the banks chasing it away with clubs?

What Will the Answer Be? Chicago Record-Herald. It begins to look as if Opportunity were going to walk booby up to Taft's door and deliver a knock that may be heard clear across the country.

A Threatened Handicap. New York Tribune. The constitutionality of the federal confederacy will be considerably magnified if Mr. Bryan takes the income tax amendment under his wing and makes it his own, as he now proposes to do.

The Club Still Lives. St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Governor Stubbs of Kansas has resigned as a member of the Topeka club because it keeps a locker, in opposition to Kansas law.

Around New York

Snippets on the Current of Life as Seen in the Great American Metropolis from Day to Day.

In the Poconto hills a few miles above New York, where Rockefeller's castle looks down upon the Hudson, there lived until recently one man with a real grudge against the Standard Oil king.

When Melvin was ready to dispose of his property, however, he hunted up a friend in White Plains whom he could trust, and disposed of the property to him.

After putting them through an examination as to their knowledge of streets and places in New York, the manager selected on probation an exceptionally bright little chap from Brooklyn named Harry Jordan and dismissed the rest.

When Harry had been gone half an hour the manager began to wonder what was keeping him. At the end of an hour he was satisfied that he had made a mistake in trusting a strange lad with money, and by 1 o'clock he was certain that he should never see boy or dollar again.

"Where on earth have you been?" demanded the manager. "I was afraid I'd lost you," said Harry as soon as he had recovered his wind.

With those words, put in the form of a petition, Charles Krapp, a fireman, who with legal permission substituted a "u" for the "a" in his name last Tuesday, next day asked Judge Blanchard, in the same remote court, to translate him back again.

To any rich American woman who is ambitious to cultivate in the society of the European nobility a woman, styling herself as the Marquise De La Rochebriant, offers a display of twenty-nine choice titles from which a selection may be made.

stones in a small pocket of his coat. While he was describing them the police arrived at the hospital with the missing gems.

BREEZY TRIFLES

"The house fly must go!" said one scientist. "There is no comfort in that assertion," answered the other. "The house fly's roving disposition is precisely what causes the damage."

"It is no longer a reproach to a man to him that he is a hot air artist."

"There is such a masculine touch about the dresses she wears."

"I sold the property to him $2,000 cheaper than I would sell to John D."

"I could get here even earlier, dad, our club, you know, closes at 8."

"I want a man with some experience as a public performer," explained the stout man.

"So your daughter has been to cooking school?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. McGudley. "I suppose she has learned along the household economies."

"When Harry had been gone half an hour the manager began to wonder what was keeping him."

"My mother is heart-broken and prostrated because I changed the name which she so much honors and takes such pride in."

"I don't know what it was going to mean to my mother," he said.

"All right," said the judge. "Krapp it is and shall be hereafter."

SONG OF THE R.P.

With fingers rebellious and stiff, With frown on the front of his head, A bachelor sat on the edge of his couch, Plying his needle and thread.

With a lonesome note on his lip, And still with a voice of dolorous pitch He sang the "Song of the Rip."
