Third Prize Story

HOW ANNA SECURED HER GOOD POSITION

Yera Willams, Juniata, Neb. Aged 15. Ninth Grade of Hastings High school, English teacher, Miss Ena Brach, Father,

WANTED-A nurse girl at - St. When Mrs. Thomton's last maid left her she was entirely without help to care for the children. Van, the eldest, aged 8 years, declared he would help his mother and little sisters, for was he not mother's little man? He had heard her say to himself. But Mrs. Thornton thought it best to place a want-ad in the Bee.

In a few days a stout looking German girl made her appearance. She was fairly good looking and looked healthy and good natured. Mrs. Thornton resolved to give her a trial at least.

The first time she combed Lela's long yellow hair, the comb caught in a tangle, and their owner screamed with vigor, Anna was not used to children, but she soon grew to be very fond of her little charges But it was evident they did not like her, even baby Maude cried when Anna came near hear, and all the children thought it quite a treat when papa or mamma took them for a walk or drive.

Anna could not talk good English and was often seen crying over a letter bearing a foreign post-mark.

One beautiful warm spring afternoon Mrs. Thornton and the children went to the parks. Mrs. Thornton sat down on the seat and lifted the baby from her carriage, and the other children clustered around her, begging for a story. For mamma was a famous story teller.

It was, indeed, a pretty sight. The sunlight came slanting through the trees, touching Lela's hair and turning it to gold. Roger sat on the grass, expectantly looking up into his mother's brown eyes, se like his own.

"Now for the story, mother," said Van. Then mother told of a little girl who used to live far away over the ocean, with her mother, father, and little brothers and sisters. They were poor and had to be very saving to keep their little home. Finally when Anna, the oldest girl, was 15, she wanted to come to America to work and earn money so her parents equid come here, too.

So one morning she started away from home, for the first. They were all very sorry to have her go such a long distance by herself, but they thought it was for the

When she reached Omaha, she knew no one and was lonesome and homesick too. and then she saw our ad in The Bee, and came to be your nurse, Anna Rheames. "How do you like that kind of a story? Don't you think The Bee a fine paper for securing us such a nice girl?

"I guess we do," anid all the children as one, "and is our Anna that girl you told us about? "I know how she feels," said 4-year-old Roger, "when I went to grandma's in Council Bluffs and stayed all night, I wanted my mamma all the time, and cried some when grandma wasn't looking." Then the children laughed. Anna was seen coming down the walk with their coats, for it was getting cool.

'I'm going to give her my flowers," "So am I," they all said, and the childron danced away to meet Anna, and were fully repaid by the kiss pressed on each
