HOW A WIDOW AND HER DAUGHTER RECEIVED A HOME.

Anna Henrich, Flattsmouth, Neb. Box 325. Daughter of Jacob Henrich, First grade of High school. Principal, Mr. Brooks. Age 14 years.

WANTED-Cook and second girl, 3416 Dewey Ave. Tel.

"Oh, Dear! I don't know what we will do next, for we have only a few cents left." These were the words a poor widow said to her only daughter as they were sitting together one day.

"Mamma, if I could only get a place to work, it would help us along nicely," said Alice.

"But, my dear, you can't stand it, working all day, for you are too small yet. I would rather go myself than sending you. "Oh, mamma! Something has come to my mind. I have heard so many people praising The Omaha Bee want-ada, for they bring such good results. Why not let us try and see if we cannot find a place where we can work together so we will not be parted? If you have a nickel, give it to me and I will go and buy an Omaha Bee, and we will try our luck. Her mother gave her a nickel to buy a paper. Alice ran as fast as she could, while her mother was anxious for her return.

She soon came back, and they sat side by side, glancing over the want-ads, to see if they could no; find one suitable for them.

Soon Alice read one aloud which made them both happy, it was the one as written above.

"That will just be fine," said her mother, "we can both be together and earn enough to make us happy."

Early the next morning they telephoned to the above number. The people, being without help, took them at once.

They were well satisfied with them, and were very fond of Alice. During the winter they sent her to school and gave her an education. She would help her mother before and after school.

They now were happy and, Alice especially, for having an education, which would have been impossible if they would not have read the want ads.

Nebraska's Municipal Problems

The Commercial Clubs and similar organizations scattered over Nebraska must be not only the directing force but the business custodian of the mnuicipality.

Organization is the chief impulse of this century; the achievement of any given purpose with the least loss of time and energy.

Our cities are too young to have yet measured the chief real obstacles to be overcome in their development. We have not yet evolved a coherent public opinion through which the state -as a state-can "find voice." We are depending largely upon economic accident, and personal initiative, for our progress along these channels in which we have all a common interest.

The quickest and the cheapest way to build a state is to build it by associated effort. When that is realized it will be acknowledged that the first step is the federation-in some form-of the commercial clubs of Nebraska.

Such a commercial federation would have to be developed as expediency suggested. It could start with no cut and dried program. But it would begin, and labor, and be guided by a mastering idea.

Such an affirmation would foster a watchful spirit of state pride, an active conception of civic honor, a respect for the state, and the cities of the state, equal to the respect we each feel for our family and our home.

Civic pride lies at the bottom of the city beautiful. Every promoter is a booster. Few boosters are promoters. "The Story of Nebraska," is being continued each week in The Sunday Bee and from time to time will speak of the different commercial clubs of the smaller cities, what they have accomplished and what they hope to accomplish.
