The main event was a twelve-round bout between Malone of Denver and McDermott of Philadelphia. McDermott appeared the more graceful boxer and his swings were far more spectacular and had more steam behind them than the Italian's. The Italian was thin chested and his shoulders protruded awkwardly to the front, making his back round almost to deformity. He kept fighting all the time, though, McDermott jollied him until the eighth round, when by a punch the awkward looking Italian settled the whole business. The men stayed in until the latter part of the ninth round, when Mobermott gave up the fight on the ninth count without rising from his knees.

Man Overcome By Heat.

Webster Steward of Twenty-fifth and I streets was overcome with heat yesterday afternoon at the Union Stock yards. He was helping load hogs and just as the work was done he dropped unconscious to the ground. The stockmen threw coldwater on him and Dr. C. M. Schindel took him in charge. By evening he had revived enough so that danger of death was thought to be passed. He was taken home and will probably be ill for several days. This is the first case reported this summer of the effect of heat. Magic City Gossip.
