weet Pickles-For one-half bushel small, even sized cucumbers make two gallons of brine, with one cup of salt to each gallon of water. Turn this boiling hot over the cucumbers and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain off the brine, then pour over them, boiling hot, one gallon each vinegar and water, with a piece of alum about the size of a marble dissolved in it. Let stand forty-eight hours, drain, rinse in cold water and wipe gently with a soft towel, so the skin will not break. Pack in jars with an occasional little Mexican red pepper and bits of horse radish root. Now make a sweet spiced pickle to pour over them, consisting of two gallons cider vinegar, eight pounds sugar, more or less, according to taste; onehalf pound white mustard seed, one ounce whole cloves, two ounces stick cinnamon, one ounce celery seed and four blades of mace. Heat scalding hot and pour over the pickles. In a few weeks they will be ready for use and will keep for several years. If desired, they may be put in an oldfashioned stone crock at first, spreading a cloth over them when perfectly cold, and then putting on the stone lid. The next spring put in glass jars so the little vinegar flies cannot get at them, but do not reheat the vine-
