LAWYERS FOR HOTEL KEEPERS

the hotel answer as near as possible a home, for such it is for the traveling public. He urged that the hotel men of the several legislative districts get together and discuss their needs with the candidates who are seeking to be sent to the legislature to make laws. Hotel men should take an active part in politics, for their self-protection.

Other papers of the morning were by A. L. Hungerford of Crawford, Neb., on the question of "Hotel Men," and the difficulty of securing it. A. E. Wooden of Des Moines read a paper dealing of the ways and wherewithals of certain features of hotel management and pointed out a few remedies.

All of the papers were subjected to an animated discussion.
Afternoon Program.
During the afternoon papers were read by F. J. Taggart of the Loyal hotel of Omaha on "Hotels I Have Met," by E. J. Donahue of Sioux City on "The Hotel of the Future," and by John Willey of the Hotel Monthly of Chicago on "The Traveling Man."

Following the business session, cars were taken at 3:30 for Lake Manawa and Council Bluffs for an afternoon as guests of the Council Bluffs hotel men. The evening was spent in Council Bluffs, the business session resuming at 9:30 this morning.

Additional members of the association registering Tuesday were George M. Christian of the Elliott, Des Moines; Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Park of the Grand, Council Bluffs; John Willey and M. S. Trevelin of Chicago.

Discussion of the Loyal hotel, Omaha, injected an interesting and timely question into the hotel men's meeting Tuesday afternoon, which is liable to bear fruit and effectually settle the "bad check" question, which is the bane of all hotel men.

No class of business men in the country is more imposed upon by bad checks and drafts than the hotel men. Not because they are particularly easy, but the very nature of their business compels them to do a large check and draft cashing business, most of which is perfectly good.

Mr. Taggart's proposition is that the hotel associations stand back of the prosecution of such cases, and that every case be prosecuted instead of being compromised. This, he held, could be brought about through the national association, the local and state associations paying an annual tax into the prosecution fund for this purpose.

"Every case," said he, "of this kind that is compromised, is only an encouragement for the check or draft writer to repeat the operation. If, on the other hand, he knew that he would certainly be prosecuted, the infamous work would be stopped. The plan could be operated just as the Bankers' Protective association is operated, and the culprit could be prosecuted where ever found, instead of leaving the whole expense of the prosecution to the individual hotel man who may be the particular sufferer."

The proposition seemed to strike the association favorably and the matter will come up for further discussion at today's meeting.
Tuesday afternoon's session began with an amusing paper by Mr. Taggart on "Hotels I Have Met." John Willey, editor of the Hotel Monthly of Chicago, read a paper on "The Traveling Man—God Bless Him."

A letter was received from Smith B. Hall of the Hotel Madison, Minneapolis, stating that he would be unable to be present at the convention, and Secretary Medlar was asked to read Mr. Hall's paper on "Hotel Publicity." Mr. Hall recommended that every first class hotel should have attached to its staff a "publicity man," whose sole duty should be to look after the hotel's advertising. He advised the use of personal letters to prospective patrons and favored the pictorial postcard as an effective means of hotel advertising.

Visit Council Bluffs.
The afternoon meeting closed at 3:45, when the delegates and the women members of their families took a special car for Council Bluffs and Lake Manawa, as the guests of the Council Bluffs hotel men. The party stopped at the Grand hotel for refreshments, and later proceeded to Lake Manawa, where boating and bathing were indulged in for the greater part of the afternoon, following which a breakfast dinner was served the visitors at the club house.

The visitors returned to Omaha in special cars about 10 o'clock.
The convention will close today. Five new members were added to the association at yesterday's meeting.
