A Record Worth Noting

Charleston News and Courier. Not a single passenger in the United Kingdom lost he life in a railway accident during the year 1906. This is a remarkable record, particularly so in view of the fact that it was not many years ago that an express train to London was wrecked and many Americans killed. No doubt many will wonder why just as good a record the fruits of the victory of 1892, and added value given by social causes. cannot be made in this country. The answer is that it has been made, for on one of the greatest of the western railway systems there was no loss of life whatever during the year 1908.
