MAUSAREDIS GETS DEATH

Greek Who Killed Officer Lowery Sentenced to Be Hanged.

HIS CASE WILL BE APPEALED

Doomed Man Insists He Shot in Self-Defense and Thinks He Should Receive Only Few Years in Prison.

John Masaredis, the Greek who shot and killed Officer Edward Lowery in South Omaha February 13, was sentenced by Judge Sutton Saturday morning to be hanged.

The date of the execution was set for January 15, 1910. J. M. MacFarland and James E. Hatt declared their intention of taking the case into the supreme court. The sentence followed the overruling of a motion for a new trial that had been pending for some time.

The contention for a new trial was on the question of the introduction of the testimony of Bill Brewer, the girl the Greek was with when the officer was shot. She had made a statement to the police which was unfavorable to the Greek, but when put upon the stand reversed her testimony. The defense contended that her former statement should not be admitted, but the judge sustained the county attorney in admitting the first statement.

After Masaredis had been informed through an interpreter that he would enter 30 days, the judge repeated to him sentence after sentence that he could blame no one but himself for his approaching death and that he ought to prepare himself to meet his God.

Says It Was Self-Defense. The interpreter repeated the words to his countryman, half fearfully, and the Greek, who stood with his head down during the sentence, mumbled some unintelligible words in a husky and almost inaudible voice. When asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against him, he declared that he had shot in self-defense and thought that he should not get more than a few years in prison.

Judge Sutton replied that he had been found guilty of a premeditated murder by the jury and that the death penalty had been recommended and must be given. After he had been told to bid his friends goodby and prepare for death, his attorney, J. M. MacFarland, told the interpreter to tell him that "It was all right—there were still higher courts."

Masaredis was arrested by Officer Lowery Saturday, February 13, and shot him on the way to jail. The result of the murder was a demonstration and riot against the Greeks Sunday, the next day, in which dozens were wounded and the city thrown into a condition of anarchy that destroyed $25,000 worth of property. A mass meeting was held in the South Omaha city hall, which was addressed by a number of prominent lawyers, and after that a mob wrecked the Greek shining parlors and saloons and it took all the efforts of the force of Sheriff Bradley and Chief Briggs to prevent serious loss of life.

ONE OF THE BIG FOUR

Rise in the Railroad World of the General Manager of the Union Pacific.

The illness of E. H. Harriman affords abundant material for speculation on the succession should the head of the system be obliged to give up active control. E. J. Edwards, writing for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, reviews the careers and capacities of the "big four" of the Harriman lines—Robert Lovett, the legal prop; Julius Kruttschnitt, operating lieutenant; John C. Stubbs, traffic manager, and A. L. Mohler, general manager, rating them as possible successors in the order given, and classifying each as competent to manage the great railroad system.

Of Mr. Mohler's rise in the railroad world the writer says: "Some years ago one of the big men in a trunk line system which has its terminal in New York was asked by a friend if he could tell him anything about A. L. Mohler, who had something to do with

'Jim Hill's railway out in St. Paul'

The New York railway man, replied that he did not know Mohler and had never heard the name before. Thereupon he was informed that the time was sure to come when he would hear of Mohler, for he is certain to be one of the big guns in railway management. Such he most certainly became when Mr. Harriman took him away from Mr. Hill.

"As his name indicates, Mr. Mohler is of Pennsylvania Dutch origin. Born at Ephrata, Penn., he yet began his railway career with the Chicago & Northwestern, when it was a comparatively small road, and long before Marvin Hughitt and James D. Laying had taken it 1,000 miles across the uninhabited prairie. Mohler remained a humble clerk only a little while, and then, like the present president of the Boston & Maine, Luctus Tuttle, he became a station agent.

"While thus occupied at Erie, Ill., his superiors found that he had a native-born gift for figures and accounts, and in that way he became traveling auditor for a railroad west of the Mississippi. Such he was when he fell under the eye of James J. Hill, then keen in his search for young men to help him convert the old St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad into the Great Northern system, and Mr. Mohler became that road's general freight agent. This was in 1882.

"There followed promotion after promotion, until, at the end of seven years, Mr. Mohler found himself vested with the title and authority of general manager of the Great Northern. As such he became out many of the problems whose solutions have helped spell success for the Hill properties. Eight years later Mr. Harriman annexed him, and so he has the honor of being the first of the 'big four' to secure Mr. Harriman's confidence.

"That he has had Mr. Harriman's full confidence from the start is shown by the fact that the latter at once made him president and general manager of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company, a particular Harriman pet. Today Mr. Mohler is also a vice president and the general manager of the Union Pacific system. It is because of his peculiar managerial qualities that he is held by Mr. Harriman in such high business esteem."

GROWERS ASKED NOT TO GLUT THE COTTON MARKET

Governor Sanders Issues Statement on Best Way to Get Good Prices.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 11.—The following statement has been issued by Governor Sanders to the cotton growers of Louisiana:

"It is evident that the cotton crop of the south will be short this year, and especially the Louisiana crop. It is also evident that if the crop is rushed to market and sold as fast as a gun that a small price will necessarily obtain, while a gradual, slow marketing of the crop will secure better prices. "The farmers should therefore sell slowly and just as the mills need it, selling only when the price is high and withdrawing their cotton from sale entirely on all depressions. This plan of marketing should be followed by every cotton grower of the south."
