Thieves Have Spotted Dentists—The police detectives are on the lookout for mysterious gold thieves who have been forcing the doors of various dental offices and making away with raw gold to the value of many dollars. The first case reported was that of Dr. Parker in the Neville block and several like robberies were committed in offices in the Continental block. Notice has been sent out by the police to all the dental offices in the city to watch closely for suspicious characters, and to safeguard the raw gold. The work is evidently being done by a skillful burglar.

Dairymen Sue City for Damages—Martinus Svendsen, a dairymen, has sued the city for $10,000 damages, alleging that the construction of a drain and sewer which empties upon his land at Grand and Ames avenues has made it impossible for him to carry on his business. He leased a twenty-acre tract from George E. Barker and used it as pasture for his milk cows until the water from the drains made it unsanitary. When it became unfit for pasture the health commissioner, he alleges, confiscated his milk and forbade him to keep his cows on that land. Since his lease does not expire for several years, he declares that he has the land on his hands without any possibility of profit and wants the city to make up the loss.

ELI H. DOUD HELD BY JURY

Former South Omaha Attorney in Trouble in Chicago.

HIGH FINANCE IS THE CHARGE

He and Brother, James M. Doud, Accused by Newly Elected Officers of Manipulating Funds of Acorn Brass Company.

Indictments returned in Chicago have brought to light a story of alleged high finance involving two former South Omaha business men, Eli H. Doud, at one time in the furniture business with George H. Brewer and formerly city attorney of South Omaha, and his brother, James M. Doud, who was a live stock commission man in South Omaha until his removal to Chicago, where he is engaged in the same business. Newly elected officers of the Acorn Brass company secured the indictment of the two brothers on a charge of wrongfully securing $20,000 of the company's money and carrying away the accounts of the concern.

Both men through their attorney made an emphatic denial of their guilt. The officers of the company have also begun suit in civil court against the two men for $20,000. They both appeared in criminal court and gave a $20,000 bond for their appearance.

Mr. Brewer when told of the trouble his former partner was in expressed great surprise. "That is settled," said Assistant General Manager Paisley.

Some time ago President Diaz wrote to G. W. Wattles, president of the exposition, saying he hoped the duties of his office would enable him to grant the request of the exposition for the presence of the Douds at the National Corn exposition in Omaha this winter.

"That is settled," said Assistant General Manager Paisley. "The National Band of Mexico, that organization that whines out its weird and fantastic airs for President Diaz, will make music at the National Corn exposition in Omaha this winter."

This band is some band down in Mexico and when anybody, but the chief executive of that tropical island, Mr. Wattles, received a telegram from Ambassador Thompson at Mexico, asking about the expenses of the band, so that as the expenses will be taken care of, the matter is regarded as settled.

The active part of Mexico has already played in the corn exposition gives it a very high seat in the affairs of this institution and the coming of the band will tend to elevate that position.

TAKES HER SECRET TO GRAVE

Woman of Ninety-One Lives Twelve Years at County Hospital in Uter Solitude.

Ninety-one years of life ended for Mrs. Henrietta Yates, a widow, at the county hospital, Fortieth street and Poppleton avenue, from sheer old age, Wednesday. Into the silence of death she carried her life story with her. In twelve years at the hospital as a county charge she maintained an absolute silence about her life and experiences. She did not even confide her story of work and failure to Rev. E. J. Freese, a Lutheran minister, who occasionally visited her at the hospital. In all the twelve years there the officials were not able to learn the names or whereabouts of any of the aged women relatives.

"Henrietta Yates, admitted November 1, housekeeper, widow, birthplace Saxony." This is the brief story told by the records of the hospital—all that could be gained from Mrs. Yates.

She was buried in Laurel Hill cemetery from Cole-McKay's undertaking rooms.

WOMAN KILLS SELF WITH GAS

Ill-Health is Supposed to Have Temporarily Unbalanced Her Mind.

Mrs. Marie Krause of 2015 Pierce street committed suicide yesterday by shutting herself up in the kitchen of her home and turning on the gas. She is thought to have been temporarily deranged. She was found about 6:30 o'clock and was dead. She was last seen about 11 o'clock by the neighbors and nothing could be learned concerning what time she committed the deed. Officer J. T. Dunn, who was called, broke open the door and found that the gas jet was wide open and the gas had filled the room.

Mrs. Krause had threatened to take her life and had attempted to do so on previous occasions. No reason can be assigned for her act except ill health. She was 52 years old and had lived a number of years in the city. She was the wife of Otto Krause, who is employed as a boilermaker in the plant of the Drake-Williams company, 2207 Pierce street. Miss Lillian Krause is her daughter.

"In Dreamland" at the Boyd.

Emmet Devo and company in "In Dreamland," a comedy-phantasy in three acts and five scenes, by Emmet Devo.

Molly Hammond, "Bob's" wife, Tommy, "Bob's" valet, William Jerome, "Bob's" maid, Emily Anderson, Mrs. Wagstaff, "Bob's" mother-in-law, "Bob's" friend, Emmet Devo, Hans Herman, a victim, L. B. Carleton, Madame Seance, a spiritualist, "Bob's" friend, Miss Eva Randolph, Madame Seance, a spiritualist, Perry Sperry, a daughter, Miss Hermine Stone, Annie Boone, a barmaid, Miss Jane Wilbur, Helen, a shady character, Joseph Fisher, Dick Smith, a former friend, Thomas Erroll.

Emmet Devo and his company opened a two-night stay at the Boyd last night to an audience that had undoubtedly come to be entertained. Moreover, if applause and laughter is to aid in forming an opinion, the audience was entertained. "In Dreamland" finds its origin in several other comedies. It borrows its central theme from "A Message from Mars," reducing the high comedy of that piece to low comedy, for the better uses of the star. It goes back to a number of well known extravaganzas for its "tricks" and "effects," and altogether provides an evening of amusement of a worthy sort, with something of a lesson effectively taught.

Mr. Devo acts the role of a young business man completely satisfied with himself, and convinced that all others exist as he. He neglects everybody for his own comfort, and proves himself to be thoroughly dislikable. A dabbler in the occult, he becomes obsessed with spiritualistic notions imparted by an adventure, and on the eve of deserting his wife for the woman who is luring him to his undoing he falls asleep and dreams. In his fancy he is led by a spirit from Venus to the ether world, where he sees a number of strange sights and gets an inkling at least of the truth. He also learns what others think of him, and is cured of his selfish ways and soon home to lead a better life. The part gives him plenty of room for his capacity as a comedian and he makes it quite funny at times, and at others ridiculous.

The company supporting Mr. Devo is entirely capable and the whole comedy is very effectively rendered. While none of the lighting effects or "tricks" are startlingly new, they are all well worked and add greatly to the telling of the story.

"The Blue Mouse" at the Woodward.

A farce-comedy in three acts from the German of Adolph Hensel, by Clyde Devo, under direction of the Shuberts. The cast:

Faulette Divine, "The Blue Mouse" Blanche Devo, Lovell, "The Blue Mouse" Wilton Taylor, Annie, "The Blue Mouse" Edna Graham, Mrs. Lewellyn, "The Blue Mouse" Ida Palmer, Augustus Rolett, secretary to Mr. Lewellyn, "The Blue Mouse" Geoffrey C. Stein, Mrs. Rolett, "The Blue Mouse" Caroline Pearce, Valius, her father, "The Blue Mouse" Philip Scarsdale, Harry R. Milard, Edna, "The Blue Mouse" W. O. Heyner, Madison, "The Blue Mouse" Flanagan, Purkin, "The Blue Mouse" Edward Lukas, The Old Boy, "The Blue Mouse" Thatcher, Lizze, "The Blue Mouse" Millie Stevens, Policeman, "The Blue Mouse" John Dunne, First porter, "The Blue Mouse" Frank Didworth, Second porter, "The Blue Mouse" Oliver Johnson, First lady, "The Blue Mouse" Gertrude, Second lady, "The Blue Mouse" Isabelle MacIntyre.

"The Blue Mouse" as a sensation became known in Omaha last season. It was then discovered that the highly advertised naughtiness existed in the fertile pen of the press agent who had seized the chance so to advertise it during a period of declamation against improper plays.

This has left "The Blue Mouse" standing on its own merits. It is a play, which amuses a great many people when well acted, in spite of the fact that its situations are of archaic device and its climax somewhat artificial.

Well acted it is by the present company. Miss Blanche Devo is one of several who have played Faulette Divine, the actress impersonating young Rolett's wife, and Miss Devo is not excelled, if equalled, by these others. She is a young and attractive woman with some considerable claims to good looks and she has much talent.

Wilton Taylor is cast as Lewellyn, president of the Inter-State Railroad company,
