SEVEN TICKETS FOR QUARTER

Council Slated to Pass Ordinance with That End in View.

WILL BE UP NEXT MONDAY

Pending Bridges Ordinance Likely to Be Amended to Benefit Workers and School Children Morning and Evening.

Next Tuesday evening the city council is expected to pass an ordinance calling for the sale of seven tickets for a quarter from 5 to 8:30 in the morning and from 5 to 7:30 in the evening. Such seems to be the understanding around the city hall. The pending ordinance providing for the sale of 6 tickets for a quarter between the hours named and which Councilman Brucker reported for filing, but which was sent to the committee of the whole, will be taken up and amended to provide for seven tickets at the meeting of the committee of the whole next Monday; unless present plans fall down, and will have eight votes in favor of its passage on Tuesday evening.

The city clerk's office has been counting the names on the petitions for a special election falling passage of the ordinance embodied in the petition under the referendum law. There appears to be a sufficiency of names and the bunch of petitions has been turned over to the city legal department for careful examination as to form. There is a question, however, if this petition ever goes to a final; that is, to the point where a special election will be called to vote on six tickets for a quarter at all hours, with twelve for a quarter to school children. Many of the men most active in getting the petition circulated and signed are taking the position that if the pending ordinance is amended to provide for a special election tickets during the hours about all that can be asked. To the attainment of this end they are now bending their energies and claim with fine prospects of success.

DIADEMS FROM KING'S CROWN

Flying Gems Caught in the Royal Atmosphere.

Colonel John Grant Maher saw the electrical parade Wednesday night. The colonel had a special invitation from the mayor to occupy a seat on the grandstand in front of the city hall. But he was late in getting there. The only vacant seats were in a crowd of officers of the army. The colonel stepped up the steps and said: "Pass right along," said the gatekeeper. "This is reserved for army officers," said the man. "That's what I thought," answered the colonel. "What I regret that I am not sufficiently known to be recognized by you as a branch of the service."

"Pass right along," said the keeper, recalling an incident of the Spanish-American war and the words used by Colonel Mahler to General Fred Grant. "I am merely here to pay my respects to the King as a loyal subject should do," said Judge Samuel H. Sedwick of York, as he viewed the crowd from in front of the Paxton. "I am not doing any politics or worrying about the campaign," continued the judge, "for at this time I am devoting myself exclusively to the king. I have seen since Chicago day at the World's fair," said J. H. Buckstaff, one of the most enterprising and hustling citizens of Lincoln. "The parade was as good as it had been advertised and better. It does me good to be in Omaha at such a time."

Who Drank All That Red Ink?

Whoever Did Better Keep Out of the Path of Dan Butler, City Clerk.

"What became of all that red ink, is what I want to know, and it's what I am going to find out," said City Clerk Butler. "We know that everything else sent out of this office for the registration booths went through all right and was there when needed. Why all the red ink should disappear we cannot quite figure out. I've heard of men drinking vinegar, and the liquor in which beets have been pickled has a reputation among men of strong tastes, just as cologne and painkiller is popular with Indians, but I'm up against a new stunt on this red ink game. Why, enough of the fluid was sent out to float a man, and nearly all of it vanished. "This morning a friend gave me a tip to look up certain people with red noses, but how am I going to tell how long those shining headlights have been in the making? A chemical friend at Creighton says the stomach that can rejoice in a red ink bath would be a fine one to pass on; and, from another source, comes the tip that certain moochers were displaying a fiery brand of hilarity after 8 o'clock Monday evening—and far from a saloon, too. "I'm puzzled, I'll admit, and the only good explanation so far comes from a man who says the word was passed in certain quarters that a particular blend of exciting whiskey has long been credited among the wise ones as being composed of red ink and pepper sauce. I am on that trail now, and the solution of this fierce waste of city property may be at hand."

D. W. WOODS INVITES PALS TO MATHEWS' BIRTHDAY PARTY

One Alleged Bandit Sends Out Cards for Another's Feast at Hotel de Bralley.

Arrangements have been made for the celebration of the twenty-second birthday of Bill Marvin (Bill Mathews) at Hotel de Bralley some time in the near future, in which only the alleged Overland Limited mail bandits will take part.

D. W. Woods has been designated as the chairman of the committee of arrangements and has sent out the following invitation to his friends at Spokane and elsewhere to be present. The letter of invitation is given verbatim et literatim: "OMAHA, Oct. 1.—Dear Friends at Home: We are doing fine and we are getting along. I regret that we are not getting along. We are doing fine and we are looking forward to a grand time soon. Mr. Bill Marvin has invited all of the most prominent men of the country to attend his 22 birthday party. (He says the last birthday remembers of was he was 21). Among the guests that will be present is Mr. Jack Shelton, Fred Targeten, and the Sontomonus Fred Targeten, he will act in his official capacity as Chaplain for the day. He will open the entertainment with a few words of praise. And then Mr. Jack Shelton will entertain with a speech to some of his thrilling experiences in the grand middle west in and around the vicinity of Omaha, and the program will be closed by Mr. Fred Targeten and the Sontomonus Fred Targeten, he will give a few touching remarks on the propriety of attorneys at law. Mr. Bill Marvin will also entertain us with a re-statement entitled 'Gravy' every day. Gravy every day. Gravy every day. We have got to eat their gravy till our Mr. Marvin says the best thing that he can see about the gravy he does not have to eat it unless he wants it, but I can notice from my parlor window that every time the gravy dealer comes around he has got his lunch grabbed out to get it, and receives it with a smile. "The next on the program will be a song by myself. It is a very sad and touching thing. I believe that it will bring tears to the eyes of the inmates in the jail. It is entitled 'What Became of the Key to the Douglas Co. Jail.' "The next will be the grand feast which will consist of chiefly of small pieces of roast beef and plenty of gravy. Mr. Marvin had had the county officials to obtain a few cans of German suds. "The Lillian Sturges has also been sent a very pressing invitation to attend the grand party, but as she lives in a very remote part of the Co. it is not likely she will attend, but if she does she will be expected to take part in the entertainment around with the 'paper strings.' He kept on smoking. Directly he fell asleep. In a few minutes he awoke and when he did he found himself the center of a circle of fire. His cigar had lighted the paper strings. Then he heeded."

They were throwing the little balls of colored paper strings everywhere Wednesday night. A ruralist sat in front of the Merchants hotel smoking his good old pipe, apparently heedless of everything but his own comfort. Some boys would climb around with the "paper strings." He kept on smoking. Directly he fell asleep. In a few minutes he awoke and when he did he found himself the center of a circle of fire. His cigar had lighted the paper strings. Then he heeded.

WILL REPAIR CUMING SOON

Street Will Be Torn Up as Soon as Ak-Sar-Ben Has Ended His Gaiety.

City Engineer Craig will begin tearing up Cuming street, preparatory to paving, just as soon as Ak-Sar-Ben has closed his gaiety for the season. "We shall be at the work next week," said the engineer. "The street railway company now has all of its iron here, and the work can be rushed to completion, I hope, without further delay." The brick for this job, which will take in the territory between Sixteenth and Twenty-fifth avenue, has been on the ground all summer. The street railway has finished about two-thirds of its work, preparatory to paving Fifteenth street, from Davenport to Howard, and the city engineer believes the laying of the asphalt will begin within a short time.

REGISTRATION FIGURES GROW

Tabulation Indicates Average of One Hundred or Better to Precinct Last Tuesday.

In City Clerk Butler's office a commencement has been made on the tabulation of the results of Tuesday's registration. Judging from the precincts already tabulated, the average registration per precinct will be a trifle over 100, which would give probably 5,000 as the total registration last Tuesday. On Saturday, October 23, the final registration for this year will occur, and the heavy end of the voting lists is still to be made up. To get this out, each political committee will bend every effort. The socialists are looked to for a greater effort than ever, as they hope to equal many democratic votes for Ted Morrow, their candidate for sheriff.

King Edward Intervenens in the Budget Crisis

LONDON, Oct. 7.—While the House of Commons is concluding the committee stage of the budget, the king, assisted by unofficial advisers, is actively intervening to prevent the crisis which the government's financial proposals threaten to precipitate. The house has accomplished its task so far as consideration of the bill is concerned, the last clause passing in committee after a late sitting tonight, the fight so far as Parliament is involved being adjourned until November 13, when the measure comes up for report.

What the outcome of the king's intervention will be few are willing to prophesy. The leaders of both parties are silent, but the rank and file still demand "surrender" and refuse to believe that the leaders will give up what they have been fighting for months. A member of the cabinet is quoted as saying that there will be no compromise and that the lords will pass the bill as it leaves the commons. It is quite likely, however, that the bill will be much modified before it leaves the lower house, thus enabling the lords, without loss of prestige, to agree on the bill, on the understanding that the election will be held in January.

The general public who have the greatest confidence in the king's diplomacy are waiting for the return of Premier Asquith from Balmoral castle. The premier spent the party at his majesty's Scotch seat, where there have been long and earnest consultations directly between the king and the prime minister as between the latter and Lord James Hereford, who, having always taken a somewhat detached view of party strife, is better able to press his majesty's wishes on the leaders than any other public man in England. It is a rather delicate matter for the king to intervene in domestic affairs, and as a matter of fact, this is the first time he has openly done so. He has precedents for this, however, Queen Victoria having intervened twice, on the Irish church bill and on the Irish reform bill, in which she successfully acted as conciliator. The present occasion is more serious, but the public is convinced that the king's statesmanship will be no less successful than that of his mother. During his absence Premier Asquith has been in touch with the members of his cabinet. A private wire between Balmoral castle and Downing street, was kept busy all day long, a further indication, if it were necessary, that the king had most important suggestions to make. The adjournment of the House, which Chancellor Lord George announced, will enable the leaders to consider the king's suggestions without discussion, which would be certain to occur if the House of Commons were in session.
