FIVE YEARS FOR SANFORD

Prisoner Wants to Read Statement, but is Not Permitted.

FIVE THOUSAND FOR GRIEF

Mrs. Rose Mowery Thinks She Suffered that Much for Failure of George Foster to Keep His Promise to Marry Her.

Charles M. Sanford, convicted of shooting at and wounding Claude N. Gano, a neighbor, on the morning of April 15 last, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Woodruff in district court to five years in the penitentiary at Fort Madison.

Sanford has had a somewhat turbulent career during the last year, and before his recent trial an effort was made by his friends to have him adjudged insane, but it failed.

Sanford, in anticipation of his sentence, had prepared a lengthy statement, which he intended to read to the court, but Judge Woodruff refused to permit him to read it.

Judge Woodruff yesterday set the trial of Ben Sloan, charged with the murder of James Wallace, a young Scotchman, who was beaten and thrown from a Northwestern passenger train near Crescent City on the evening of May 12 last, for Monday, October 18.

The following new assignment of jury cases was made by Judge Woodruff: Monday, October 11—State of Iowa against Myra Stevenson; State of Iowa against Maggie Hill.

Tuesday, October 12—John Chadwell against John Olson.

Wednesday, October 13—City of Council Bluffs against Charles Stevenson (three cases).

Friday, October 15—Arthur Clay French against Andrew A. Larson et al.; National Bank of Commerce against Fickinger Bros.

Monday, October 18—State of Iowa against Ben Sloan.

Tuesday, October 19—State of Iowa against Leon Ploette.

Wednesday, October 20—John Scherer against Alfalfa Meal Company.

Thursday, October 21—Kimball Bros. Company against Citizens Gas and Electric Company. Monday, October 25—Theodore Stortenbecker wants pay for grief.

Mrs. Rose Mowery of this city who in her petition says she has been a widow for five years, filed in the district court yesterday a suit against George Foster for $5,000 damages for alleged breach of promise to marry her.

Mrs. Mowery recites in her petition that she and Foster were "friends and acquaintances" before either was married, and that a few months after the death of his wife, Foster began calling on her, and continued these visits up to the fall of last year when, she alleges, an agreement was entered into that they should be married.

The records in the office of the clerk of the district court show that on September 25 of this year a marriage license was issued to George W. Foster of Council Bluffs, aged 40, and Stella Miller, of Crescent, Ia., aged 18.

Edward Mason yesterday filed suit for divorce from Mary Mason, to whom he was married in Rockford township, Pottawattamie county, on May 9, 1897. He says that the defendant deserted him and their two children in July, 1904, and remained away four years. She returned and was readmitted into the family circle on the understanding that she would care for the plaintiff and their children, as a dutiful wife should.
