Talks on Teeth

ALVEOLAR DENTISTS

A Practical Plan

The Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth is a practical plan.

We have copied as closely after nature as possible, so as to make Alveolar teeth not only natural looking, but natural acting, practical "food-chewers," firm as a rock in the mouth and beautiful to look at as well.

The great success of the Alveolar Method has "stirred up" the profession to such an extent that from end to end of the continent there are dentists promising something in the way of a "method" of restoring missing teeth without plates that is supposed to be "just as good" as the only original alveolar. But each and all lack that "something" necessary to make a perfect piece of work.

You can see how necessary it is to get into the right office, for if teeth are lost or destroyed by bungling dentistry they are gone forever.

Briefly, the Alveolar Method is a means of restoring missing teeth without the aid of partial plates or ordinary bridge work. All that we require is two or more teeth, no matter which ones, in either jaw to work from.

If these teeth are loose we can tighten them by means of this method.

And when the work is done—then—you will be happy. You will feel and look younger, for beautiful teeth enhance the beauty as well as make for good health.

So, why not make an effort to have this work done by us?

The preliminary examination costs you nothing—in money or obligation.

We must see what the condition of the mouth is before we can promise a perfect piece of work.

Send for our book if you are not near enough to call, and read it carefully.

Then you will want to call.

Logs for Buddhist Temple.

When it leaves Linnton for China the steamer M. S. Dollar will have on board one of the most singular cargoes of lumber that has ever left the port. Its deck load is composed of huge unsawed logs which are destined to go into a Chinese temple.

There are about twenty-five of these logs, and they range in length from 105 to 106 feet. They average about forty-three inches to the butt, and each weighs in the neighborhood of fifteen tons. They will be discharged somewhere along the river between Shanghai and Hankow, after which they will have to be taken a long distance into the interior of the country, where they will be used in making repairs to a Buddhist temple which is many centuries old.

The work of transferring them from the coast to their destination will be an enormous task, as for most of the way they will have to be transported by some primitive methods, and it will be the work of months to get them to their destination.—Oregon Journal.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Politics and religion are habit; morals, fashion.

Pride can take its fall and think it was an ascension.

The reason a woman can go mad over a man is he ought to over her.

What gives people keenness about things is the danger they may turn its edge.

When Opportunity Knocks.

A new Jersey farmer, whose farm is near a school for boys, was greatly annoyed by the depredations of the youngsters. Finding two of the boys helping themselves to his choice apples, he ushered them from his premises, ably assisted by the toe of his boot.

The following day he found the same boys loitering in the vicinity of his orchard fence.

"What you young scamps hangin' round here for?" he shouted. "I told you yesterday what you'd git if I caught you on my land ag'in."

"Yes, sir, we remember," explained the spokesman. "We didn't come for apples this time. We came to ask you to join our foot ball eleven."—Harper's Weekly.

Warning.

"No, Alice," counsels the fond mamma, "you should not marry Mr. Leftover. If you do you will regret it."

"Why, mamma, because he is a widower?"

"Not exactly. But he will not make a good husband."

"Why, mamma! Everybody knows that while his wife was alive he was a shining model for all the other husbands in town. He never drank, smoked or swore; he never stayed out late at night; he never danced with anyone but her—he was simply perfect."

"I know, my child. And I want to tell you that a man who has been held down that way during his first marriage will know how to dodge such rules the second time."—Life.
