

FRIESLAND FARMS
CERTIFIED MILK

We Now Have Ready for Delivery to Our Customers, Certified Milk and Cream from the Friesland Farms, Owned by Dr. B. H. Davis, of Our City.

This farm and the production of the milk is in charge of Prof. E. M. Little, formerly of the Agricultural college of the University of Nebraska.

Prof. Little has had several years of practical and technical training along these lines and is exceptionally well qualified and equipped to superintend the production of a milk of this superior quality.

This is a day of germs and especially with milk-perfection is only obtained by rigid sanitary conditions and absolute cleanliness.

On this farm the stables and milk house with cement floors are perfectly washed. The milkers wear white suits changed before each milking. The milk after taken from the cow is immediately conveyed under cover to the milk house and cooled to a temperature of 40 degrees, then bottled in sterilized bottles, hermetically sealed and when delivered to you is only a few hours old, clean, fresh and pure.

Its production is under the supervision of the Health Commission of Omaha, the object being to give you the purest and very highest grade of milk possible at a reasonable price.

For infant feeding the milk is without question the very best that can be obtained anywhere, and we, as well as the doctors, cannot recommend it too highly for this purpose. You will find it the same every day, always containing the same degree of purity and richness, which is necessary in a regular food for the baby.

We take especial pride in offering this milk to the public, as no expense has been spared in its production and every effort made to make it a perfect milk in every respect.

Owing to the additional expense required in its care, we are only asking a slight increase per quart over the other grades we handle. Price 12 1/4c per quart, delivered.

Telephone us for a trial. Order and see for yourself.

STORY OF SALVATION ARMY

Commander Eva Booth Tells of the Work it is Doing.

LABORS AMONG THE LOWLY

Aim is Not to Pauperize with Gifts, but to Help Those in Need to Help Themselves—Large Crowd in Attendance.

With a pretty play of oratorical and dramatic art, Miss Eva Booth, commander of the American branch of the Salvation Army, entertained an audience of 1,000 persons Friday night at the Auditorium. She set forth in interesting terms a graphic picture of the purposes, ambitions and work of the Salvation Army.

Miss Booth said that the work of the Salvation Army for the last twelve months had been the greatest year's accomplishment in the forty-two years of the history of the organization. Her address was full of the fervor and enthusiasm of her subject. A series of most pathetic stories, impressively related, comprised much of what Miss Booth impressed upon her audience. She is making a tour of the country in behalf of the army's organization. She arrived in Omaha late Friday afternoon and expects to leave for the west this morning.

Material Help for Humanity. Miss Booth told of the development of the system whereby the army gives material aid to the suffering and needy along with the religious efforts with the lower classes. She quoted figures which indicated the remarkable extent of the industrial system of the army. She told of the utilization of waste for the relief of the poor, and the employment of the weary work-hunters. She evinced a particular enthusiasm over the Salvation Army stores, where garments are sold to the poor at prices within their reach.

"They go in and get an overcoat for the shivering boy for maybe 10 cents, a coat for the father for 15 cents. It is ever so much better than giving it to them," said the speaker earnestly. "Let them save pride. They are buying clothes for the children, buying them with their own money, and they feel better fathers and mothers for it. What does it matter if they buy for $1 cast-off clothes which cost $25?"

The Salvation Army has given more help to the poor than any other organization set afoot since the creation of the world. It is not the help that encourages pauperism. It is help which makes a man put out his arms and help himself.

"We say: Do you want work? Well, here is work for you to do."

"When the poor man is down, help him up. The man who has no feeling for his fellow man is not worth anything. He is nothing."

The meeting was opened by an address of welcome from Mayor James Dillman, who eulogized Miss Booth, her illustrious father and the work of the Salvation Army. A number of clergymen of the city were on the platform with Miss Booth. Dr. Loveland, pastor of the First Methodist church, offered the prayer of the meeting.

Lieutenant Blackman, one of the fairest young women in the ranks of the Salvationists, a singer, is traveling with Miss Booth. Lieutenant Blackman sang a solo, accompanied on the harp by Miss Booth. Her song produced a profound effect.

Miss Booth is accompanied on her tour by Colonel Frank C. Chicago, Brigadier Mrs. Stymon of New York, Brigadier McMillan of Des Moines and Major Griffiths, private secretary.

NEW HOPE FOR DOPE FIENDS

Speedy Remedy for Alcoholism and Drug Habit Announced in New York

The announcement made by Dr. Alexander Lambert of East Thirty-first street, New York, visiting physician at Bellevue hospital, and professor of clinical medicine at the Cornell Medical college, that he has at least discovered a speedy cure for the drug habit and alcoholism has aroused much public interest. Men of his profession are particularly interested.

The fact that Dr. Lambert is a physician of high repute and a recognized authority in the matter of specific kinds of medicine to his contention that the most confirmed drug fiends are not beyond cure.

"The obliteration of the craving for narcotics is not a matter of months or weeks," says Dr. Lambert, "but is accomplished in less than five days. The result is often so dramatic that one hesitates to believe it possible."

The physician says he obtained the specific about five years ago from Charles B. Towns of 113 West Eighty-first street, who spent some years in China studying opium cases among the hospitals there. Since that time he has been experimenting with it extensively in his practice at Bellevue. Here is the specific:

Fifteen per cent tincture of belladonna (the fluid extract of anathoxylum (prickly ash), and the fluid extract of hyoscyamus, mixed in the certain proportions.

The cure, according to Dr. Lambert, can be effected with a minimum of suffering, and no matter how long the patient has been addicted to the habit, or in what quantities he has been accustomed to take drugs, he will be placed in the same attitude toward them as before he fell into the habit. His health will be in no way impaired by the treatment, or the deprivation of the drug; on the contrary, a physiological change comes about whereby, all desire being eliminated, self-confidence is restored to the patient, and his system adjusted to without it.

Dr. Lambert says, however, that he has no intention to call the specific "an infallible cure." He says:

"This treatment is not a cure-all for disease, a rehabilitator of all the disturbed functions of the body."

As to the method of treatment, as Dr. Lambert explains it, after employing it in Bellevue in the case of twenty-eight patients, all of whom he cured, it begins in the usual way of getting the patient into proper physical condition. Then, in cases of cocaine or morphine, the specific is administered in certain proportions and quantities, depending largely on the individual, every hour throughout the treatment. But after six hours the specific is increased until the quantity is doubled—New York Times.

SIGNS OF TIMES IN KANSAS

Voiceless Signals in a Desert Bring Relief to Parched Throats.

"Can I get a glass of beer or a little schnapps?" asked an eastern man recently of a friend, just after he arrived in a certain Kansas town.

"Sure," was the reply. "Sure, if the signs are right."

To get a drink or a cigarette in Kansas during these perilous times you have to know the proper sign of distress and signal it after the approved fashion to "some one who knows."

The most commonly used signs are: Two Fingers Up With Hand Turned In—A bottle of beer. Left Arm Extended, Thumb Down, Fingers Straight Out—Drink of whisky. Two Thumbs Up, Fingers Closed—Half pint whisky.

Twirling Thumbs With Fingers Folded—Two bottles of beer. Finger in the Ear—Highball. Pulling the Lobe of the Right Ear—Gin rickey. Hands Over the Heart—Whisky and lemon.

Crossing of Leg Above Knee Standing—Royal gin fix. Crossing Leg Below the Knee—Silver gin fix. Both Arms Extended—"Patsy Connor." Finger at the Tip of the Nose—Manhattan cocktail.

Hands Clapped Behind the Back—Dutch soda. Shaking Hands With Yourself—Champagne. Whirling Fingers Around Temples or Making a Motion Like Hammering—Cigarettes or "coffin nails."

A veteran Methodist preacher who was in the habit of laying his hands on his boy window, clapping his fingers and twirling his thumbs while thinking over the problems of the ministry, stopped at a hotel in a Kansas town the other day and waited in the lobby while the porter did an errand for him. He got to thinking and twirling his thumbs. Another porter noticed him. He walked by the patriarch and whispered:

"I'll leave them in your room."

"Wh-what?" asked the preacher, startled from his reverie. But the porter had gone on. A little while later the preacher went to his room. He had been there but a minute when he popped the porter with a mysterious package under his arm. Unfurling the papers he planted a couple of plates of beer on the table and suggested to the preacher to tip him 5 cents for the brace and the work of getting them.

"Sir!" shouted the preacher, "what do you mean, sir, by bringing beer into my room? What do you mean, sir, you law breaker?"—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

ZEUBLIN TEARS DOWN LINES

Economic Distinctions Hindrance to Fellowship.

TOLSTOY CITED AS EXAMPLE

Failure to Embrace Humanity as the Basis of Fellowship Cause of Existing Social Insecurity.

The rich often find nothing to satisfy their poor starved and dwarfed nature. "If we could rid ourselves of economic distinctions we might have a more spontaneous fellowship. At the time of the San Francisco earthquake economic conditions were leveled when they all stood in line to get their bread, rich and poor, educated and uneducated. They had never known such good feeling, such a depth of human sympathy, for on that occasion there was but one economic standard. Let us hope for the time when we shall not care whether there are any economic differences. We are constantly threatened by our social insecurity, which is due to the fact that we are not big enough to embrace humanity in our fellowship, which can only be done by forgetting social distinctions and being human beings. As we gain modesty by contact with the common life, by sharing those things which are so common, so also we become tolerant and thoughtful and respectful of others. We find our particular follies are not theirs. Why should we disparage weaknesses because they are not ours? We carefully conceal ours while we expose theirs. Only through this process of sharing the common life may we relieve ourselves of the prejudices which hinder fellowship. We shall lose our religious prejudices when we come into contact with the common life. Genuine religion ought to remove all barriers, but sectarianism erects barriers. The more we believe in a common life the more likely we are to believe in a genuine world-wide religion. The biggest man in the world today is our greatest religious example, Count Leo Tolstoy. He has a world-wide influence because he knows no barriers of race, religion or language. "The training of children in dancing, even more than any other form of exercise or class recreation, is one of the obligations of the public school, so important is it that children should be taught to dance. Though not exactly in the religious sense, it may be called a means of grace. These contributions to our physical nature are always subject to misuse, but that does not make them unworthy." "Papa," said a youngster, "has the devil got a tail?" "Some folks say so," answered the father. "That must be nice." "Nice? And why?" "Because he can tie it to his little boy's cart and pull him along." "All Profit. "Young Binks is running a profitable hennery of thoroughbreds on his dad's $1,000.00 farm." "So?" "Yes. He has the feed charged to his father's bill. He has the eggs at the fancy price for the Binks' table, and young Binks is the biggest egg consumer in the family."—Judge.
