

CONSPIRACY IN PAUL CASE

New Charge is Intimated by Counsel for the Wife.

WOMAN HERSELF TAKES STAND

She is Confronted by Letters She Wrote to Her Sister Upbraiding Her Husband in Cautious Terms.

While counsel for defendant in the Paul divorce case began laying through cross-examination a foundation for a charge of conspiracy, the second session of the trial developed a good deal of testimony to fortify Mr. Paul's case.

As at the afternoon before four men—J. Bodwell, Dr. H. C. Smith, formerly of Florence; Ed H. Walker and Robert Decker—were named as having been too intimate with Mrs. Paul.

While much of the testimony in the case was unpleasant there came a lighter touch through the evidence of Mrs. J. P. Brown, A. W. Jeffers for Mr. Paul asked the witness "If Mrs. Paul had a well furnished home?"

"It was a whole lot better than mine, at any rate," said Mrs. Brown.

"Was Mrs. Paul ever common in her conversation?"

The witness hesitated and then replied: "Well, I should say that Mrs. Paul sometimes was just a little silly in her talk."

Mrs. Paul on the stand.

The event of the session was the calling of Mrs. Paul to the stand by the plaintiff. She was then asked to identify four letters which she admitted were in her handwriting. The plaintiff offered them in evidence and at the request of General Cowin, Mrs. Paul's counsel, they were not read aloud, but were handed to the court.

They are the letters which Mrs. Paul wrote to her sister, Maude Allen, a New York Hippodrome actress, and the contents are given in the plaintiff's second amended petition. It is there alleged that Mrs. Paul left them lying around the house and not sealed.

Paul then, read them and kept them until the trial. It is charged that they contain much that is scurrilous and many statements which would harrow the feelings of the plaintiff.

Mrs. J. B. Nichols was recalled to the stand when the trial was resumed in the morning and cross-examined at length. It was plainly General Cowin's purpose to show that she had talked again and again with Mr. Paul about his wife with the implication that Mrs. Nichols had egged him on.

The testimony thus went again and again over Mrs. Paul's meetings with Bodwell, the sudden flight of Dr. Smith when Mrs. Nichols entered the Paul home and surprised him and Mrs. Paul, the meeting with Robert Decker and her friendship with Robert Decker.

The deposition of that man, which is known to contain an affidavit damaging to Mrs. Paul, was opened in court, but not read. Paul secured this in Seattle, having gone there for the purpose. Mrs. Margaret Gordon, the plaintiff's sister, was the last witness.

Mrs. Paul was moved to tears at the afternoon session, when Mrs. Gordon resumed the stand and told of the death of an infant born to Mrs. Paul.

FIVE DOLLARS FOR A SLEEP

Rates at Hotel de Haverly Are Stiff for Men Like John Malley Was.

Drunk enough to recognize his condition himself, John Malley drifted into the police station and handing a $10 note across the counter, asked Patsy Haverly, desk sergeant, to care for it until he called later.

"What you need is a bed," said Patsy, calling the man behind the railing. Malley went to bed and left the rest of his money with Patsy, too.

On the plea of his benefactor, Malley was allowed to leave $5 with the city and depart in court in the morning.

Howe to Build an Armour Plant in the Argentine

Manager of Omaha House May Also Go There as Head of Immense Packing Mill.

R. C. Howe, manager of the Omaha plant of the Armour Packing company, is now in the Argentine Republic, where he is building what is said to be one of the largest packing plants in the world. This is Mr. Howe's third trip to that country this year, his first trips being preliminary to Armour & Co. entering that territory. It is also rumored that Mr. Howe is to be manager of the new plant.

Armour & Co. have been contemplating building in the Argentine for some time and the scheme has been worked out on a gigantic scale. One of the biggest moves in that direction was the election of Samuel McRoberts as vice president of the National City bank of New York. For some years Mr. McRoberts has been Armour's leading financial man, looking after all large investments of the Armour millions. He has been president of the Illinois Tunnel company, the Sioux City Street Railway company, a director in the Union Stock yards at South Omaha and in many of the other larger concerns in which the Armour family are interested. It is now said that his transfer to New York is to be in a position to handle the immense South American business Armour's are to build up with that country.

Mr. Howe is a young man who as manager of the Omaha plant has shown marked ability.

Dean and Sullivan Give $100 Apiece

Democrats Running for Supreme Court Admit They Gave That to Campaign Fund.

The nullification of the plan for publicity of the campaign fund contributions by the national democratic committee is done without the knowledge of at least some of the candidates. Judge Dean, so word comes from Lincoln, says he contributed $100 to the last campaign and now Judge John J. Sullivan, democratic candidate for the supreme bench, says he chipped in the same figure to the state committee.

"This contribution was sent to the committee early in the campaign, as a matter of course," said Judge Sullivan. "I may say that I am not familiar with the terms of the law that now governs campaign funds, because I have given it no attention. I am not a candidate by my own seeking, and am really indifferent as to the result. If the people want me on the supreme bench, all right; if they do not want me, I shall be just as well satisfied. We are comfortably situated here now, and my practice is quite satisfactory in every respect. Since 1886, I have not taken an active part in any campaign and am not doing so this time."

Three Omaha Duck Hunters Pursue That Diet, Not by Choice, but Necessity.

"If three duck hunters can eat eight dozen eggs in four days, besides stowing away liberal quantities of flap jacks, how many hens would it take to feed a regiment, etc.?"

This is the conundrum William Haffke of the Byson Reed company brought back with him from Wheeler county, where he and H. A. Searle and George L. Lundberg spent several chilly and hungry days waiting for the ducks to light among the reeds.

The three hunters were not trying to break a record in consuming this unusual amount of hen fruit. They were put up against the proposition of eating it or starve and they naturally chose the former. Sixteen miles from civilization they found themselves alarmingly shy on grub. One day they ran across a farm house, but the only thing in the way of provisions they could readily take was eggs. They laid in a store of eight dozen and from then until the end of the trip each man consumed an average of eight every day, which with reduced rations of flap jacks and bacon made pretty fair eating, so they assert.

The party returned with seventy-five mallards.

BOYSEN AND HIS BIG DAM

Builder of Basin Gate is Now Installing the Machinery for It.

Amos Boyesen, builder of the Big Horn dam at the entrance to the Big Horn gorge, was in Omaha for a short time Wednesday. Mr. Boyesen says that while the dam is completed, the work of installing the machinery is still under way.

"We want to finish up the work of installing the machinery first, as so many enterprises are waiting for the power and after that we will be ready to take up some work of irrigation which has been waiting for the completion of the dam," said Mr. Boyesen. "We have 30,000 acres ready for irrigation as soon as we can get around to it and there are many more acres which might be irrigated during certain months from the flood water."

Spens is being well fed on eve of his marriage.

Victim of Friends in Three Cities at Dinner Parties as Parting Shots.

Conrad E. Spens, general freight agent of the Burlington, is having a strenuous time just before his wedding, which will be celebrated Saturday evening in Council Bluffs. He has been the guest of honor at a large number of functions and more are in sight.

Tuesday night Mr. Spens entertained his ushers and a few friends at the Omaha club. Those present were J. E. Buckingham, Alex. M. Jeffrey, Dr. W. C. Bridges, Arthur Kesline, E. W. Dixon, J. T. Stewart, E. M. Fairfield and Luther Drake.

Thursday night many of his friends have arranged for a farewell stag dinner at the Omaha club in honor of Mr. Spens. The list includes Luther Drake, C. A. Hull, E. W. Dixon, F. A. Nash, M. L. Learned, S. F. Miller, Dr. W. C. Bridges, J. E. Buckingham, John R. Spens, E. M. Fairfield, E. P. Peck, F. T. Hamilton, W. M. Burgess, J. T. Stewart and A. M. Jeffrey.

Last Saturday night railroad friends of Mr. Spens gave him a complimentary farewell stag dinner at the Chicago Athletic club in Chicago, and two days before that Kansas City friends entertained at Kansas City for Mr. Spens.

An impression has crept out of all this that Mr. Spens is being well fed.

DEMOCRATS IGNORE CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT HERE, TOO

Fall to File Expense Accounts in Douglas County as Well as in State.

Democrats have not only ignored the corrupt practice law they enacted last winter relative to filing campaign contributions at Lincoln, but also in Douglas county. County Clerk Haverly has received a statement of contributions over $50 from W. E. Rhodes, treasurer of the republican county committee, but no statement has come from the democratic cash book custodian.

The law provides that these statements must be filed fifteen days before an election and the republican statement was there on time.

The Rhodes' statement includes these items: F. A. Purdy.....$ 200 John A. Scott..... 100 Frank Bandle..... 100 W. A. Yoder..... 100 Bryce Crawford..... 100 Charles Leslie..... 100 George McBride..... 50 D. M. Haverly..... 200 E. P. Hralley..... 200 Joe Morrow, a candidate for assessor in the third district, is the only man on either party who has withdrawn.

CONNELL SORE AT CRITICS

Health Commissioner Out of Patience on Quarantine Subject.

SHOWS THE NEED OF HIS ACTION

Points to Specific Case Where Nasal Diphtheria Proved Fatal Day After Examined by the Physician.

Health Commissioner Connell is losing patience with the critics of his course in the matter of quarantining for diphtheria. "It is every whit as distasteful to me to quarantine these folks as it is to them to be quarantined," he says. "Wherever possible to isolate the afflicted person, with the nurse, without endangering the health of the rest of the family, we permit the wage earners to go about their usual occupations. Neither do we keep anyone under quarantine any longer than is absolutely necessary, but we cannot release them while culture after culture shows positive. As an example, there is one block—the 909 block on North Twenty-fifth street—in which there are six houses quarantined, all on the same side of the street. With this fact before our eyes, can anyone still insist that nasal diphtheria is not contagious? Take the Saunders school as an example. It has been stated in The Bee that the twenty-seven positive cases taken from among the 400 pupils in that school resulted from contamination brought in by the five children of one family, wherein there was originally but one child affected.

"Duration of quarantine cannot be exactly regulated as to days or hours. We must be on the alert as long as cultures taken by ourselves or the family physician show positive. There is in New York a noted case of typhoid infection, where a woman has been under quarantine for two years and is still held; and yet she never had typhoid fever.

"Some of these doubters should talk to Attorney Charles Battelle, whose brother died from nasal diphtheria the day after he had been examined by an Omaha physician, to whom he was brought too late for anything to be done to save him.

"The danger is just there. The children afflicted with this form of diphtheria are not sick, apparently, and their condition excites little or no worry. Neglect is the great thing to be guarded against, since every time they breathe, or sneeze, or blow their noses, they scatter the germs about."

A motion by C. C. George for the appointment of a committee of three to raise the money was adopted.

The funds will be asked of all real estate men regardless of whether or not they belong to the exchange.

Already over $8,000 of the $15,000 for the publicity work has been pledged.

Hanson's Death an Accident, Says a New York Jury

Verdict of Coroner's Inquest Just Now Received Opposing Theory of Suicide.

Toif Hanson came to his death by accident and not as a suicide, according to the verdict of the New York coroner's jury, which has just passed upon the case.

E. F. Leary, trustee in bankruptcy for the Hanson creditors, has this word from the coroner: "The evidence at the inquest showed that if Hanson did contemplate suicide he made singularly few preparations in the lodging house room where he died.

The evidence at the inquest showed that he had not plugged up any of the cracks in the door, and more than that, that one of the windows was left partially open.

Practically everyone in Omaha has believed that Hanson took his own life because of the circumstances of death by asphyxiation, of his long absence from the ken of his friends and of his highly involved financial affairs and hopeless debts.
