

WEBER

High Praise from an Authoritative Source

ONE of the leading figures in America's musical life, is Andreas Dippel, Administrative Manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

In a recent letter Mr. Dippel says in commenting on THE WEBER

"My own high opinion of the Weber I find is confirmed by the individual artists of the Opera Company, who have frequently expressed to me their appreciation of your magnificent instruments.

"I cannot conceive of any higher endorsement of a Piano than to be selected and used by an organization composed of such distinguished artists as is the Metropolitan Opera Company. When I hear the Weber played, I do not wonder that it has been the choice of this great company for ten years."

Are you hesitating about which Piano you would prefer to have in your drawing room? We invite you to visit our establishment and let us show you the Piano that the foremost musicians of the world prefer to any other—The Weber.

Antonio Scotti, world famous baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Co., appearing at the Auditorium Evening of October 30th, has selected for his accompaniment the famous Weber Piano.

MRS. BENNER ASKS DIVORCE

Daughter of Late Senator Van Wyck Complains of No Support.

NOT FIRST TIME IN PUBLIC EYE

Eight Years Ago, in Washington, She Jumped Out of Nuptial Bonds at Altar Just Before They Were Performed.

Mrs. Theodora Benner, daughter of former United States Senator Van Wyck, has filed a petition in district court seeking a divorce.

Mrs. Benner was Miss Wapping Theodora Van Wyck. She was born in Washington, though most of her life has been passed in Oso county, Nebraska. She was born on the first day of the year, which is reflected in the name "Happy Theodora." On her divorce petition her identity is hidden in the name "Theodora Benner."

Mrs. Benner will be remembered for having eloped with the whole country about eight years ago when at a prominent Washington church she fled from the altar just before the ceremony was completed.

Mrs. Benner says she has considerable property, left her by her father, the late United States Senator Van Wyck of Nebraska, but this property is encumbered by reason of the fact that Benner did not support her and the money which he got from her. Mrs. Benner says she has been temporarily living in Omaha for the last six months because her homestead burned and that she has never established a residence during her married life because she and her husband were continually traveling.

Mrs. Benner in her childhood days was well known in Omaha, where she has been a frequent visitor. She has one son, a boy of about 6. Her husband lives in New York and a summons has been issued on him there. If the case is contested it probably will be on a jurisdictional ground.

ATHLETICS IN THE FAR WEST

Edmundson of Idaho Great at Middle Distances.

SOME NEW WONDERS ON TRACK

After Winning the Half Mile Championship, He is Said to Have Broken the 600-Yard World's Record.

The season's campaign in the far west, even if it served no other purpose, is to light the champion middle distance runner of the year and perhaps the fastest man ever seen on American soil. This crack is Clarence Edmundson of the University of Idaho, who won the national half mile title at Seattle by about eight yards from Harry Giesing of the New York Athletic club and incidentally equalled the championship record of 2 minutes 24 seconds. A tall, lean racer, the Idaho man went about his work with plenty of confidence, and from the crack of the pistol showed that he was out to win. In the draw for position he chanced to get the pole and aligned out in the order named were Miller, Olympic club; Giesing, New York Athletic club; Hamey, Chicago Athletic association and Giamer, Olympic club.

After they broke away there was a bit of a scramble for the lead, but at the first turn Edmundson had it, and he went down the backstretch at a fearful clip and drew right out from the field. Passing by the quarter post he was leading by six or seven yards. The time there was 4:35, the fastest first quarter ever run in a half mile. When Kilpatrick made the record of 1:57 in the international meeting of 1905 the first quarter was done in 0:34, and then he was not quite up with the leaders. However, as Edmundson tore along the wise ones predicted he would blow up on the homestretch, but they were wrong, and though he was tiring he crossed the line in pretty fair shape.

Giesing's time was 1:57, which can be put down as a first rate performance when it is considered that he had a weak leg and had not time enough to rest after the long journey to Seattle. In discussing the merits of the performance subsequently the critics were of the opinion that Edmundson's figures were as good as the record allowing for the difference in condition. Kilpatrick had a perfect day and a perfect track, and while the Seattle track could be improved, the runners were surely hampered by a strong wind on the home stretch, and worse still, it was surcharged with a white, dustlike lime, which blew into the eyes and mouths of the runners.

Whether the wind and dust would amount to 1/10 seconds cannot now be accurately determined, but it is certain that Edmundson is a great man and on a fast track in favorable weather should surely take a fall out of Kilpatrick's mark. Edmundson represented the Seattle Athletic club, but on his shirt he sported the winged I, the emblem of the Idaho seat of learning. About a week after the championship he was reported to have run the 600 yards in the world's record time of 1:09, but so far it is unknown whether or not the timing and other conditions of a record-breaking performance were correct. That Edmundson is also fast for a quarter mile is no doubt, for he ran a fine race in the last 400 yards of the championship. He was reported to have run the 400 yards in the world's record time of 1:09, but so far it is unknown whether or not the timing and other conditions of a record-breaking performance were correct. That Edmundson is also fast for a quarter mile is no doubt, for he ran a fine race in the last 400 yards of the championship.

But if Edmundson proved the sensation, the real curiosity of the championship was the performance of the Indian, N. J. Indian, from Phoenix, Ariz., who managed to capture the gold medal for the five miles, and into the bargain defeated F. G. Bellars of the New York Athletic club, last year's winner. The advent of the Navajo on the path was more of an accident than a banking after a setback in the previous weeks prior to the championships the Elks club of Phoenix held an athletic carnival and McLean ran away from everything in the distance race and, most wonderful of all, he hooped it along in his bare feet. Then and there the Elks decided that he was good enough to try for national honors and he was sent to the training camp. He had learned that spiked shoes were an advantage in traveling about, though it was hard to persuade him that the spikes would not hold him to the ground.

Only four men went to the starting line, but the grind developed into a duel between Bellars and the Indian. The Indian led the crowd set up a yell like a million voices. That the screaming pleased the redskin was evident, for as he came around in front of the stand his wiry black hair seemed to stick higher in the breeze and there were more life to his lips. For with a hope he sped along like a brave on a hot trail after a palisade. Up to four and a half miles it was a ding dog affair between the pair and then Bellars tried to shake off the Navajo. His effort was in vain, for though the New Yorker sprinted in the last lap the Indian shot by him on the home stretch and won by ten yards. A great crowd surged around the Indian on his way to the dressing room to offer their congratulations, but it was all Greek to him and he answered the huzzahs with only a grunt. He could not speak a word of English.

The week following the championships there was an invitation meet at Frisco given by the Olympic club, and a three mile special event was put on so that McLean and Bellars could fight their battle over again. There was a newcomer in the race in the person of Joseph Ballard of the Boston A. A., who won the mile at Seattle and who has in his sash a medal for any distance from one to five miles. Previous to the three miles Ballard had won the mile in slow time and there was some surprise when he took the mark alongside of Bellars and the Indian. As the race progressed it was apparent that the two palefaces were using their brains against the redskin. The pace was slow and McLean was not wise enough to force it. Ballard and Bellars were waiting for the final sprint and it came when the bell suned out the last lap. Both tore by the Indian and on the backstretch Ballard pulled away from Bellars. The speed of the miller told at the critical time and the Boston runner won by a mile. The Indian led forth a loud series of grunts after he finished, for then it dawned on him that he was fooled.

Of all the big cities in America none possesses a finer climate for track and field sports than San Francisco. There an athlete could train all the year round, or at least he could keep in trim all the time, there being no off season with frost or snow to stop his practice. A proof that winter and summer is also like is seen in the New Year's Day swim of the Olympic club members at Ocean beach. It is an annual custom to walk out to the Golden Gate park and afterward take a dip in the ocean. Whatever has been done around Frisco toward the advancement of track and field sports is to the credit of the Olympic club with a history as old as the club in America, but it is now thought a sort of a job for there is not much athletic enthusiasm around Frisco.

The presence of another big club in the town as a possible rival to the Olympic club matters, especially if there was a series of dual meets which would eventually win the attention of the public. Not long ago a new club was organized, called the Alliance Athletic club, and it went off with a good boom at the start and drew a fine membership, but it was soon overrun with a squad of semi-professional boxers and foot ball players. It was rapidly going down hill when W. H. Kerrigan became chairman of the advisory committee and gave the back door to the professional element. Just now the club is in a fair way to cut some figure in athletics. There is an Irish A. C. in Frisco, but its aim is the propagation of Gaelic hurling and foot ball and other Celtic sports.

WOMAN RECOVERS HER MONEY

Mrs. Lizzie Wendt's Fortune Taken by Man She Befriended.

HE CONFESSES AND SHE RELENTS

Washerwoman Kept $7,671 in Box, but Thought It Was Only $6,500—Now Has Money in the Bank.

To have money stolen and returned with interest is an experience few people enjoy, but what seems the equivalent of this has come to Mrs. Lizzie Wendt, 315 South Twentieth street. She lost, she thought, $6,500, and she recovered $7,671. William Eschle, 38 years of age, a trackman for the street railway company, took the money, he confesses, from the woman's room while she was in his room doing some washing for him, and detectives found it buried under some kindling in a shed back of the house where the people reside. "I don't know how much there is," said Eschle. And, to prove it, the officers said the boxes in which the currency was kept had not been untied or opened. The woman, who washes for a living, reported that there was $3,000, and the officers found $7,671. Mrs. Wendt was so elated at the recovery of her life's savings that she generously offered the detectives $5. "Here, take this, you boys and go buy you some beer," she said to Detective Donahue, tendering him a $5 bill. But they decline it.

TESTING "NO BABY" FLAT LAW

Chicago Man Proposes to Give Landlord a Run for His Lenses.

Did you ever try to rent a flat in which to live with your family and have the owner refuse to accept you as a tenant because you had been blessed with children? And, if so, did you ever storm around with sensations of an outraged parent and call landlords heartless things and ask what folks were going to do who had children? If so, you have within your memory a picture of a scene that occurred at the home of Boda E. Longenecker in Chicago. He had lived in a flat four years, and was informed last summer that his lease, which expired October 1, would not be renewed because he had two little ones, Donald, aged 5 years, and Lela Florence, 3 years old. He was angered, he says, and so was Mrs. Longenecker. It rankled and rankled until when Mr. Longenecker, who is a son of the late Joel M. Longenecker, once a judge and later state's attorney of Cook county, remembered a recently passed state law making it a misdemeanor for a landlord to do such a thing and he swore out an information for the owner of the building and also for his agent. Attorney Longenecker discussed the case in his downtown office. He pointed out to the anti-race suicide law directed at landlords was passed at the last session of the legislature and went into effect July 1. Mr. Longenecker is now engaged in the organization of a protective alliance to prevent the "race suicide" property owners from disobeying the new law and to obtain for tenants other rights—Chicago News.

They regard them as the most important of all aids to progress and prosperity. Many of these pioneers own automobiles, and it is no unusual sight to see, on Saturdays or Sundays, a dozen or more motor cars of the latest designs in any of the towns of the older projects. It is interesting to note that Uncle Sam has only fairly begun the building of roads in this newly developed country, and that in a very few years the mileage will be reckoned in thousands where it is now counted in hundreds.—Van Norden's Magazine.
