New Playground Urged Upon City

Southwest Improvers Have an Eye on Tract Facing Twenty-Eighth.

The Board of Park commissioners will be urged to condemn the vacant tract of about twenty-four lots between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets and between Pacific and Mason streets and to convert it into a park and a playground for the children of that section of the city. Charles E. Foster, superintendent of the Play Ground association, addressed the members of the Southwest Improvers club last night and told them that the park commissioners were willing to condemn this tract if the people wanted them to do so. The improvements on the tract will amount to less than $2,000 after the back taxes are deducted and other assessments paid. The association proposed the plan and a committee will attend the next meeting of the Board of Park commissioners to push the matter along. The organization held its regular meeting last night. All of the old officers were re-elected and the executive committee was appointed as follows: Fred Schamel, president; J. W. Malone, vice president; V. W. Stevens, secretary; Fred Zotsman, treasurer and A. P. Williams, financial secretary. The members of the executive committee are as follows: W. H. Grace, chairman; George Colt, Fred Harman, M. J. THE OPERA SEASON IN NEW YORK

Why Out-of-Town Music Lovers Should Stop at the Hotel St. Regis. With two great opera-houses (the Metropolitan at Broadway and Fortieth street and the Manhattan at Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue), both playing full seasons and presenting the world's masterpieces in grand opera, and with the greatest soloists rivaling one another in parallel roles; the potent attractions of New York for the out-of-town music lover will be recognized and frankly admitted. New York does her share in supporting these two great enterprises, and does it impartially, but visiting musicians and music lovers must be recognized as the "balance of power," and it is their patronage that makes these enterprises continuously profitable. These visitors invariably desire a quiet, refined, restful hotel-home-like in its character, unobtrusive to an artistic spirit in its every feature. Such they will find in the Hotel St. Regis, located at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street, recognized and acknowledged as "America's finest," not only in its design and furnishings, but also in respect to its service and its refined atmosphere. The cuisine of the St. Regis is maintained at the very highest standard, being unsurpassed by any of the famous restaurants of London or Paris, while the charges are no higher than those of other first-class hotels. Room rates as well as reasonable $2 and $4 a day for a large, luxuriously furnished single room $4 a day for the same with private bath for $4 for two people. Day and up for a splendid suite consisting of parlor, bedroom and private bath.

Our Letter Box

Contributions on Timely Subjects, Not Exceeding Two Hundred Words, Are Invited from Our Readers. Fact Versus Fiction. OMAHA, Oct. 27.—To the Editor of The Bee: Referring to ex-governor Robert B. Glenn's speech made at a recent session of the W. C. T. U., it seems that in his anxiety to prove that prohibition does prohibit, he still persists in the many times disproven assertion, that U. S. internal revenue receipts were decreased because some southern states lately adopted prohibition. I append herewith figures from the reports from the Commissioner of United States internal revenue, showing withdrawals from bond of spirituous liquors, which represent the quantity tax paid for consumption during the last eleven years. (The fiscal year ends June 30th, i. e. the year 1909 covers the period from July 1, 1908 to June 30, 1909.)

Table with columns for Year, Gallons, and Dollars. Shows a general increase in liquor consumption from 1900 to 1909.

Average for eleven years.....113,332,110.3 The falling off during the year 1907 to 1908 was due entirely to the panic of October, 1907, and does not mean decreased consumption, but merely a reduction of floor stocks in the hands of wholesale and dealers who, on account of the panic, could not obtain currency for paying revenue taxes, as demanded by the government at that time, being thus compelled to do business from hand to mouth. This reduction, you will see, is more than offset during the next following year ending last June, when the total gallons drawn exceeded the heaviest previous year, the most prosperous the country has ever seen. In other words, instead of falling off over five million gallons, as the governor misrepresents, there has been an increase of one million gallons over the largest previous annual consumption, notwithstanding the great added prohibition territory. This last year in fact was twenty-two million gallons above the average for the last eleven years. It does seem that the W. C. T. U. when it engages foreign spellbinders, paying them large fees, would demand correct statistics from such people, otherwise the public must believe that its cause needs bolstering up by falsehood, and will necessarily doubt the truth of other statements made by such speakers. City Clerk Against Registrars.

OMAHA, Oct. 27.—To the Editor of The Bee: Now that the fall registration is over and inasmuch as our democratic city clerk has, (since his re-election) repeatedly boasted of the horrible things he would do "under the law" to those citizens filling the thankless position of supervisor, if possible, to give the experience of one of that number, who although never very tardy in the prosecution of his duties, was inveigled into accepting the same for another year by the false representations made at the city clerk's office. About six weeks ago being asked by the chief clerk, if I would serve another year as city clerk, I answered in the negative, but subsequently consented to serve. Calling the morning after the registration of October 28th, last, and asking an explanation of an apparent repudiation of the condition of my service, I was told by same party that "Dan did it, I don't know." My arrival I went into the city hall and stated the case in detail, (although he hardly looked at me); in a very stumpy manner he replied, "Well, what of it, I leave all those things to the chief clerk, and what he says goes—?" Now don't come around here bothering me—I replied that I hardly thought it necessary to do so again having heard both of their statements it was very easy to size up the situation. If this official, so scrupulous concerning those who devote fifteen to eighteen hours to form to a paltry stipend, would but conform to the legal requirements himself, he would be more consistent; let him see that the supervisors are provided always with the proper blanks so that the proper copy can be made for public inspection of all new names added; let him see that the registration offices are habitable and fairly warm; let him make the rounds and show himself upon registration day and familiarize himself with conditions; but no, he leaves it all to another, and what he says goes, see? It might also be said that the supervisors to see that names of all deceased democrats are stricken from the voting lists as promptly as he has those of republicans; especially just before city election. I observed this marked partiality last fall. Although this official has been in office for 24 years, and has had the opportunity of meeting intelligent business people, it seems to have had no effect; he may be considered a good representative of his party, although I doubt it; I do realize, however, that he reflects no credit upon the Irish race, and I only hope that he is the last of his kind to afflict the public at the city hall or elsewhere in this vicinity. J. A. W. MAHONY, Supervisor 1st Dist. 4th Ward.

Flagman Killed by Street Car

Hans Petersen Meets His Death at Twenty-fourth and Cuming Streets. Hans Petersen, a flagman employed by the street railway company, was struck and fatally injured by a work car at Twenty-fourth and Cuming streets Thursday morning. Petersen was carried into Dodder's undertaking rooms nearby and died a few minutes after the accident at 1:30 o'clock. Petersen, according to witnesses, was standing in the middle of the intersection of the tracks at the street crossing holding his flag stick when the work car came trundling upon him. He reached forward and grasped a corner of the car, but was unable to swing out of the way. The wheels passed over him, crushing his left leg to the hip and inflicting internal injuries. Dr. C. E. Burch was called to attend Petersen, but when he arrived the flagman was past medical assistance. Petersen was 33 years old. He lived with his son, William, at 1908 Davenport street. A daughter, Mrs. William De Lancy, lives at 1907 South Eighth street, Council Bluffs. Coroner Healey is investigating the accident and probably will hold an inquest.

REPUBLICANS FAR AHEAD ON REGISTRATION FIGURES

Have 4,460 More Votes on Lists Than Democrats Are Credited With. On Saturday last the republicans registered 4,055, the democrats 2,833 and those answering no party 678, a total of 7,566. This, added to the number registered heretofore, gives a total of 17,835 on the registration lists for the election to be held next Tuesday. The division of the registration between the parties stands: Republicans, 8,865; democrats, 5,398; no party affiliation, 1,844. This high total credited to the "no party" element is largely accounted for by the fact that some registration officers held that no man should give his party affiliation, notably in precincts of the Fifth, Sixth and Twelfth wards. Following is the total registration by wards for the three days:

Table showing registration figures by ward for the three days. Includes columns for Ward, Rep., Dem., and No Party.

"Vasta Herne" at the Boyd.

Mrs. Louie Carter, in a four-act drama by Edward Peple; the cast: Glendinning Dudley Maury; Joseph Grayson; William H. Grayson; Frank McCormack; Peter Maltenhope; Joseph Grayson; William H. Grayson; Louis M. Grayson; Ben. A.; Charles Hayne; Mrs. Louie Carter; Florence Malone; Minnie; Lily Cahill; Vasta Herne; Mrs. Louie Carter. "The play's the thing." A trite observation, but nevertheless as true as when Hamlet said it to the players. Theatergoers who elected to see Mrs. Carter in her first offering here and the better known one, made a mistake, for "Vasta Herne" is a far better drama than "Kassa." And was a better acted one. Proof of this is to be found in the impression the two plays made upon their respective audiences. Not only was audible expression of appreciation more strongly in evidence last night at the end of acts, but the compliment of close and hushed attention was paid during the tense scenes, as it was not upon the other occasion. Mr. Peple has given Mrs. Carter a drama which, while not without some minor faults, is thoughtfully wrought, logically developed, true in its essence and with some merit of novelty. It will awaken no horror and revolt, as does Mr. Long's play, but, instead, some measure at least of awe, which is the true function of tragedy. Mrs. Carter is playing in "Vasta Herne" a woman who has trespassed once beyond the border to pass which is for a woman the most tragic predicament in life. But the trouble which comes on this account when a love for another and a better man develops, is not the chief subject of the drama. The chief subject is the climax to early part of the play, the climax to the struggle with another affliction are still pending. Hartley Bellaire, publisher, not only has tricked Vasta Herne in the beginning, but, discovering that by encouraging her in the use of laudanum he can obtain from her pen a series of novels startling in a phantasmagoric way, he urges her on and on in the drug habit. The struggle to overcome the opium habit practically monopolizes the first two acts. Next, Vasta Herne, helped out of slavery by the advice of an old her lover, Mr. Dudley Maury, is confronted by Bellaire with a threat to tell the other man. He is told in Bellaire's presence by the woman herself. The attack falls, with Maury still willing to marry her. The drama seemed here to portend a conventional, commonplace, "blue-you-when-you-act" ending, but fear of this is quickly dispelled by the scene which closes this, the third act. The woman sends Maury from her, deceiving him as to herself, her action being, of course, taken in a spirit of sacrifice. Then in the fourth act he comes back to have her die in his arms. The bold narration of the central fact of an story conveys little idea of the grip which a large part of the play has upon an audience. Not altogether easily impressionable people sat with tight clenched fingers while Mrs. Carter portrayed almost too vividly the sufferings of a soul deep down in torment. One may say so advisedly, for there is anguish of the spirit as well as pain of the body and there was, too, again and again that thrilling clash and collision of character with character essential to living drama. Mrs. Carter rouses admiration the most as an actress through her wonderful elocution. Given one of the finest women's voices on the stage, she has a smooth and facile technique which allows the employment of that voice in the fullest possible measure. When she rouses the sufferings of a soul deep down in torment, all the more effectively because an audience previously fast-strung was the more easily moved to laughter. The two would have succeeded, however, without this advantage.

Many Doctors Prescribe

proprietary medicines under a Latin name, charging for the written prescription three times the cost of the medicine, and do not hesitate to condemn that self-same medicine if it is advertised or mentioned by the public. There are, however, many honest doctors who do not hesitate to openly recommend and prescribe such standard remedies as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
