Omaha Jobbers Bidding—Omaha jobbers and manufacturers are preparing to enter bids for fire apparatus of all kinds and fire hose, which the city board of fire commissioners is asking for the Department of the Missouri. A large part of the goods for which bids are asked are made or jobbed here and Omaha is nearer to all the ports in this department.

Mexican Band Itinerary—The Mexican band, which is to play in Omaha at the National Corn exposition, will leave Mexico next week for this country. The band will first go to Chicago to play at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition and will then come to Omaha. These two engagements are the only ones which the band will play in this country.

Most of East Omaha in Court—Most of East Omaha came to judge Kennedy's room in district court as witnesses in the suit of Hans Christensen against the Omaha Ice and Cold Storage company. Christensen is suing for $1,655 damages alleged to have been sustained in the overflow from a dam built by the company between Carter lake and the river. The case went over until Thursday.

Turns on the Light and Loses His Money—William Chester of Council Bluffs, came over to Omaha Sunday. He happened to have some barley juice on him and went down Twelfth street at about 7 p. m. At this alley between Farnam and Douglas, he was set upon by two men who relieved him of $5 in silver, all he had, and then made their escape. Chester notified the police and they are seeking the men.

Man to Throw Away His Money—M. J. Iola, residence 212 South Twenty-seventh street, Omaha, was evidently drunk too much currency upon his person Sunday night. At least it appeared so from the way he tried to throw it away in a Ninth street resort. After he had scattered about $140 about the floor the police were summoned and found Iola hopelessly drunk. He was taken to the police station and a $5 bond, but when his case was called in police court Monday morning did not show up, and the bond was forfeited. But what was $5 to a man who tried to throw away $140?

Yes, Tyler Dies of Arsenic—The coroner jury, charged to inquire into the death of George Tyler, the colored man who shot and slightly wounded Mrs. D. Lewis, 212 South Twenty-seventh street, Friday and then took arsenic, from which he died at police headquarters early Saturday morning, brought in a verdict of death as the effect of arsenic taken with suicidal intent, when the inquest was held by Coroner P. C. Healey Monday morning. Tyler was enamored of the woman, who resented his attentions and informed her husband. After upbraiding the woman, Tyler fired twice at her, one of the bullets lodging in her left hand. She is not seriously injured and testified at the inquest.

Some Things You Want to Know
The Housing of Congress
The American legislative plant is so much larger than the ordinary visitor to Washington, imagines, that very few persons appreciate its immensity. The buildings occupied and used by congress, including the library of congress, contain more than 1,400 separate rooms. There are forty elevators, several thousand windows, more than a thousand doors, and everything else in proportion. Even the telephone service is larger than that of an American city of 10,000 inhabitants. Posters who are in the habit of accreting Americans with innuendo and vulgarities and with a disposition to consider quantities rather than qualities, are surprised to find that this huge legislative plant is known more for its artistic beauty than for its vastness.

Old Bears Ever New.
Swarthy faced men in comic opera garb, with dark eyes and fierce mustaches, strangely suggestive of the banditti of the Appennino, gather nightly in the tents about the bubbling fountains to tell that old, old story in the weird accents of wild and unfamiliar tongue. The old bear now so rarely seen in the Adams clan of the southern states and a young woman supposedly entirely unknown, hinted to have come from the far orient, are to be married. No gypsy will tell what the significance of this wedding may be, and perchance he doesn't know himself.

When the capitol was enlarged by the building of the house and senate wings, congress fortunately employed a far-sighted and capable architect to plan the improvements. This architect, Thomas U. Walter, sympathetically studied the plan of the original architect of the capitol, and evolved the conception of the capitol as it stands today. The great wings were built large enough, as it was then believed, for generations to come. Therefore, king wing extended laterally beyond the front and back of the old capitol. Over the center of the old portion of the building was erected the beautiful and graceful dome, which has become in the eyes of all the world a symbol of the great American republic. Several years later the central or older portion of the capitol was extended on the west front in line with the two new wings. The next improvement proposed to be made is the extension of the central portion of the east front to correspond with those of the senate and house wings.

Fraternite Within.
The camp is not all peace and serenity. King Costello is a much exercised monarch. Flights are but trivial performances. Sunday night bitter words sprang from a discussion in the men's tent. The rivals lined up and knives were drawn. The king's cries for quiet were unheeded. He sought entrance to the tent and found every flap tied down.

Wants Omaha Police to Recover Christ Schultz, Its Lost Fellow Townsman.
The police department has been asked to attempt to locate Christ Schultz, son of James Schultz of Yutan, who disappeared from his home last Wednesday. The missing man is 27 years old, five feet nine inches tall, heavy build and has a big scar on the left side of his head near the edge of his hair. When last seen he wore a black coat, gray striped trousers and gray slouch hat with a hole in it. Schultz walks with a stoop and hangs his head. Information as to his whereabouts will be appreciated by Jerry Dalley of Wahoo or H. C. Fingers of Yutan.

WELCOMES WORDS TO WOMEN
Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physicians. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these directions are generally unnecessary, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

WELCOMES WORDS TO WOMEN
Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

WELCOMES WORDS TO WOMEN
It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't risk with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

When the congress of the United States meets on the first Monday in December, it will find itself to be the best housed legislative body in the world. With the capitol, the house and the senate offices buildings, the congressional library and the new hearing plant, congress directly and indirectly, will occupy buildings representing an expenditure of $3,000,000. The equipment of the national American legislature has come, by gradual growth, to be an estate of magnificent proportions. The British Parliament ranks next to the American congress in the splendor and beauty of its buildings, yet the London establishment cost but $1,000,000. The homes of the French Chamber of Deputies, the German Reichstag and other continental parliaments are not more costly.

The American legislative plant is so much larger than the ordinary visitor to Washington, imagines, that very few persons appreciate its immensity. The buildings occupied and used by congress, including the library of congress, contain more than 1,400 separate rooms. There are forty elevators, several thousand windows, more than a thousand doors, and everything else in proportion. Even the telephone service is larger than that of an American city of 10,000 inhabitants. Posters who are in the habit of accreting Americans with innuendo and vulgarities and with a disposition to consider quantities rather than qualities, are surprised to find that this huge legislative plant is known more for its artistic beauty than for its vastness.

The capitol is one of the most imposing structures in the world. It is not so magnificent as the British Parliament building, but when it is extended and improved in accordance with plans already adopted, will stand out without its graceful buildings, as the peer of the great pile on the banks of the Thames. The capitol was built piece-meal and its chief wonder is that it possesses any architectural beauty at all. As a matter of fact, the lines are so harmonized that the casual observer rarely notices the building is the product of different minds in different times. For the first half of the history of the republic, the capitol consisted only of the link that now binds together the senate and the house wings, and it was surmounted by a dome so insignificant as to be rarely noticed in the building as a whole. When the capitol was enlarged by the building of the house and senate wings, congress fortunately employed a far-sighted and capable architect to plan the improvements. This architect, Thomas U. Walter, sympathetically studied the plan of the original architect of the capitol, and evolved the conception of the capitol as it stands today. The great wings were built large enough, as it was then believed, for generations to come. Therefore, king wing extended laterally beyond the front and back of the old capitol. Over the center of the old portion of the building was erected the beautiful and graceful dome, which has become in the eyes of all the world a symbol of the great American republic. Several years later the central or older portion of the capitol was extended on the west front in line with the two new wings. The next improvement proposed to be made is the extension of the central portion of the east front to correspond with those of the senate and house wings.

The extension on the west front was made for the purpose of accommodating the rapidly growing library of congress. It was never large enough adequately to serve its purpose. About twenty years ago congress authorized the erection of a separate building for the accommodation of its library. That building, erected at a cost of nearly $7,000,000, was opened to the public thirteen years ago. It is a most beautiful building as seen from its exterior, while its interior ranks with the most splendid edifices in all the world. Its book stacks were arranged to hold what was then the entire library of congress, with provisions for receiving and storing the additions of a generation. However, the growth of the library has outstripped the capacity of the building, and the growth of the country is shown in the fact that the entire shelf space of the library is already leveled upon, and new book stacks are being built. The library of congress now has the third greatest collection of books and manuscripts in the world, coming after the British museum and the national library of France.

Although congress used all of the space in the capitol except the comparatively small portion reserved for the supreme court, there was not enough room to enable the senators and representatives properly to conduct their affairs. Each senator had a separate office, many of them in the third sub-basement of the capitol building, and many in a converted office building outside the capitol grounds. Such members of the house as were not time preparatory to his permanent departure for his home in New Orleans. He has announced that he will turn over the affairs of the carmen's union here to a committee. Patrick Shay of Chester, Pa., chosen at the international union's convention at Toronto to take Commons' place on the national executive board, will not come to Omaha, as had been planned.

Negro Who Killed Charles Johnson Over Twenty-Five Cents Starts Five Years in Penitentiary.
Sheriff Bralley has taken Gus Silvers, who on Saturday was sentenced by Judge Sutton of the district court to serve five years in the penitentiary for manslaughter, to Lincoln. Silvers was tried and convicted last week of the killing of Charles Johnson, the quarrel starting over a matter of a dollar. Silvers claimed self-defense, saying that Johnson pulled a gun on him, but he was faster and killed the man. From what could be gleaned from the testimony Silvers owed Mrs. Johnson the 25 cents and a quarrel ensued with Mrs. Johnson's husband.

COMMONS STILL IN LINCOLN
Strike Leader Intimates There is Not Much Prospect of Strike in Capital City.
Ben Commons, strike leader, is now in Lincoln, where he is devoting his attention to the contentions of the union men in the employ of the local railroads company there. The men are asking concessions from the company which will affect both the wage scale and the schedule of working hours. Mr. Commons declined to say on his departure whether or not a strike in Lincoln was likely. He admitted, however, that in view of the fact that representatives of the Lincoln union had been in Omaha and were conversant with the affairs of the unsuccessful strike here, it was highly probable that there would be no strike in the Capital City. Commons will return to Omaha on Thursday. He will remain here for a short
