THE CONSTANT UP-TOWN TREND OF NEW YOR HOTELS

The Hotel St. Regis Is at the Very Center of Manhattan Island.

In the days of Daniel Webster the Astor House, Brodway and Vesey Street, was the center of New York's hotel life. When Roscoe Conkling represented the Empire State at the National Capitol, the Fifth Avenue Hotel, at Broadway and In response to a question whether his Twenty-third Street, had become the hotel focus of the m. ropolis. The northward march of New York's hotel center still continues.

There are many hotels along Broadway above Twenty-third Street, but this famous old thoroughfare has become far too small to contain all of them, and many of the latest and most prominent have located elsewhere, for various reasons. One hotel, the St. Regis, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, possesses the unique distinction of being located practically at the geographical center of the Island of Manhattan, To this marked convenience of location the St. Regis adds a number of other features that place it in a class by itself. It is an idenlized hotel, built, furnished and equipcaters especially to the patronage of the refined and discriminating. Although its cutsine is unsurpassed anywhere, its restaurant charges are no higher than those of other first-class hotels. Its room rates are correspondingly moderate: $3 to $4 a day for a large, handsomely furnished single room: $6 a day for the same with private bath (or $6 for two people); and consisting of parlor, bedroom and private
