

Answer This Question

When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge the world to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the famous woman's remedy for woman's ills. Unless it is a very good medicine and the claims made for it are honest, such a record would have been impossible—fraud or misrepresentations would long ago have been detected and the business gone into oblivion. Read this unsolicited letter:—

Melbourne, Iowa:—"I suffered for many years with female troubles, inflammation, and bearing-down pains, so that I was unable to do my work."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended, and I am so thankful for the great good it has done me. I feel that I am a living advertisement for this medicine as I have influenced so many of my friends to use it, so thankful am I that it restored me to health."—Mrs. Clara Watermann, R. D. 1, Melbourne, Iowa.

When a woman like Mrs. Watermann is generous enough to write such a letter as the above for publication, she should at least be given credit for a sincere desire to help other suffering women. For we assure you there is no other reason why she should court such publicity.

We say it in all sincerity and friendship—try this medicine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Some Things You Want to Know

Incorporating the Farmer.

Efforts to organize the farmers of the country into offensive and defensive industrial alliances have not met with the success which has attended similar efforts in manufacture and commerce. Strangely enough the impulse toward organization became manifest at about the same time—just after the civil war—but the subsequent history of the two movements has been entirely dissimilar. Just now there is a recrudescence of the spirit of co-operative organization among the farmers of the country, and it is resulting in a movement which may affect the whole future of the country.

During this week the American Society of Equity will hold its national convention in Indianapolis. The National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry will meet in Des Moines, and the National Farm Land congress will be held in Chicago. The Farmers' union held its national convention the first week in November at Raleigh, N. C. These meetings represent some of the larger organizations of farmers, each differing from the others in detail, but each aiming at the principal business of incorporating the farmer.

The Patrons of Husbandry was the name of the first farmer's organization. It was planned on secret society models, and each lodge was known as a "Grange." Thus the name of "Grangers" came to be applied to the members of the order and to the order itself. The meeting of the National Grange at Des Moines this week will celebrate the forty-fifth anniversary of the foundation of the first Grange at Fredonia, N. Y. The father of the movement was O. H. Kelly of Minnesota. He became a clerk in what was then the bureau of agricultural in Washington just after the close of the war. In 1860 he was sent south to make the statistical inquiries, and it was the sad estate of southern farmers in those troubled days which impressed upon him the need for a farmer's organization.

The Granger movement spread over the country like wild-fire, and soon became of national importance. Granges were established in every community, co-operative stores were opened, and some efforts were made to control prices of farm products. At the same time the social side of the Grange was developed. The invasion and capture of the machinery of the Grange by politicians resulted in its eclipse, but its social features and its recognition of the equality of woman on the farm, saved the order from extinction. The Grange is no longer a great national factor, as an organization, but it must be credited with some excellent work. Monuments to the Grange are the numbers of co-operative farmers' insurance societies over the country. The Grange initiated the movement which resulted in the efforts to regulate railroad rates and abolish rebates and discriminatory freight charges. Rural free delivery of mail had its origin in the Grange, and its successor the Farmer's Alliance. Pure food laws owe much to the support and early championing of the Grangers.

After the occupation of the Grange, the next considerable movement was the Farmer's Alliance. This organization became very powerful in the west and south. Although it aimed at control of crop prices and co-operation in business, its chief mission and purpose was political. It arose to supreme power in many western states, controlling Kansas and Nebraska. It maintained the balance of power in such states as Illinois and Indiana. The Farmers' Alliance is the only political organization which has been able to unhorse the democratic party in the south since the war. It carried openly North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, and in every southern state it changed absolutely the current of political thought. The Farmers' Alliance rose during the late eighties, flourished in the early nineties, dissolved into the populist party and was swallowed up in the campaign of 1894.

Since that time there has been no national organization of farmers which has invited the attention of politicians. The organizations now building are being the business of controlling prices; their first consideration, leaving politics and kindred questions of secondary consideration.

The American Society of Equity is an example of this kind of organization, being similar to the farmers' union of the cotton states and other new organizations. The Society of Equity avows the purpose of controlling prices of farm products as its chief aim. Declaring that the farmer must buy his supplies from a highly organized market, representing trust-controlled labor; declaring that the farmer must sell his products to a highly organized market which is able largely to regulate demand; the Society of Equity proposes to meet organization with organization. It is its purpose to organize the farmers, institute a system of crop control, fix prices, and regulate the supply as the buying market regulates the demand. If the ultimate consumer desires to know where he comes out in this little deal, let him make his own calculations.

Two years ago the cotton manufacturers of the world met in England and mutually agreed that under no circumstances would they sell their fabrics under prices fixed by a certain schedule, and that under no circumstances would they pay more than a certain schedule for raw cotton. The cotton growing farmers of the southern states denounced this combination bitterly, while the trade journals representing the cotton textile industry praised the agreement as a great triumph of economic foresight. Whereupon the cotton growers have assembled themselves, and they have declared that under no circumstances will they sell their cotton for less than a certain price. Conditions have been favorable and they have kept their word. The same journals of the textile trade denounce the action of the farmers as piracy, while the farmers declare their organization and their purposes to keep up prices is a most praiseworthy bit of economic foresight. This is related by way of illustrating the fact that it still makes a difference whose ox is gored.

Attempts to fix the prices of farm products have been made in many countries. Governments have sought thus to thwart the operation of the law of supply and demand. Not long ago Brazil, in an effort to keep up high prices, bought millions of bags of coffee to hold back from the market. The Russian government is now considering the advisability of a large purchase of grain in the hope of regulating the amount of wheat placed upon the market. Merchants in the United States sometimes wickedly destroy many carloads of good food-stuff rather than permit a bountiful supply to force down the market price.

The great difficulty of controlling the prices and sale of farm products is that there are too many farmers and that they are too independent. Organizations looking to the control of a limited product in a limited section of territory have been very successful, as witness the fruit growers of southern California, the peach growers of Georgia and the truck farmers of various Atlantic coast communities. The growers of a certain variety of dark tobacco in Kentucky and Tennessee were guided into reprisals by the organization of buyers which forced down the price of their product to the starvation point. But some of the farmers refused to come into the combination, and insisted on selling their products to the boycotted trust. True money for their tobacco at its former price was the Night Rider organized. The result was the success of the dark tobacco growers in forcing up the price of their product caused the growers of Burley tobacco, another part of Kentucky, to organize. The Society of Equity was the medium chosen. The results were about the same—the price of tobacco was raised, the Night Rider depredations have disgraced the land and some men have become very rich.

But the farmers insist that these depredations are not sufficient to vitiate their moral and legal rights to organize. In view of the fact that the selling and buying market is organized, it is clear, however, that it is difficult to persuade all of the farmers of any section to enter into an agreement sufficiently binding to be effective.

Not only is it the purpose of the organizations to fix prices and control the supply, but also to regulate selling. It has been demonstrated in the fruit and truck-growing business that land which produces a bare living when its product is sold through commission merchants may yield a handsome profit when its products are marketed through a co-operative society. There is excellent reason to believe that the co-operative system of marketing farm products will be established. As to the other purposes of the organizations, the history of the past proves that no organization can fix prices, no matter how the law of supply and demand. It is possible, to a certain extent, to regulate supply and demand, and to resist for a time the operation of this immutable law; but it is impossible utterly to disregard the basic principles of all trade and barter.

The farmers' organizations of the '70s and '80s were the result of poverty. Those were the lean years and the farmer felt the heavy hand of fate. His crops brought but small returns, his debts were large, his land was mortgaged and he was the easy prey of the unscrupulous money lender. Now things have changed. Farm products command high prices, the farmer is becoming more and more competent in the science of agriculture, he owes no money, his land is free from mortgages and he holds up his head, proud master of the situation. His attempts at organization will be undertaken as a matter of course. Now that he has money and the consciousness of power the situation is vastly different. The future of farmers' organizations may determine the future of the republic.

Politics Warms Up at High School

Only One Regular Ticket in Field, But Independent Aspirants Plentiful.

Senior class politics at the Omaha high school is reaching the interesting stage, as all who intend to enter their names for an office have already done so and the active campaigning has begun. Only one ticket has been made out for this election, the other candidates preferring to run independently.

The two candidates running for president are Chandler Trimble and Warren Howard, the latter being the independent. Both boys are prominent in the school life, Trimble being captain of Company B and Howard being captain and adjutant of the regiment.

The other candidates on Trimble's ticket are vice president, Helen Buck; secretary, Ruth Sheldon; treasurer, Hugh Miller; sergeant-at-arms, Alfred Kennedy and Henrietta Gilmore. The remaining independents are vice president, Nancy Hase and Crystal Edgington; secretary, Erma Hadra, Florence Nason and Alice Gilson; sergeant-at-arms, Warren Scott and Sara Ayres.

The election will be held in the near future.

SOUTH OMAHA MARKET IS BEST IN THE WEST

Increase of Six and One-Half Per Cent in Number of Cattle and Four Per Cent in Sheep.

The South Omaha market to date shows an increase of 6.5 per cent in the number of cattle received, a decrease of 7.6 per cent in hogs and an increase of 4 per cent in sheep. These are the best figures of any of the markets, including Chicago. The per cent of increase in St. Joseph in sheep is 5.5 per cent, but the actual increase is only 2,000 head. This is only one or two days' fair run for South Omaha.

The actual increase in sheep in South Omaha is at present 100,000 head. The increase in cattle is over 30,000 head. As the year draws to a close it appears that the 100,000 mark will be reached. As to the decrease in hogs, the actual figures for South Omaha are 170,000 head. Kansas City shows a decrease of 415,000 head, Chicago 1,000,000 head and St. Joseph 607,000 head (30 per cent). The only market where the decrease shows a smaller per cent is St. Louis, where 2.4 per cent is the decrease. The actual decrease is a larger figure.

The light receipts of hogs has again forced up the price to $6.00 per 100. This point was reached yesterday for the first time in several weeks. About a dozen loads sold at this figure. It is likely the price may go even higher.

Prices for sheep and cattle are firm to strongly higher.

ASPHALT ON FOURTEENTH BRICK ON HOWARD

Council Committee of the Whole Thus Decides on Paving Petitions Submitted.

Taking up the matter of paving petitions at its meeting Monday afternoon, the council committee of the whole decided on the material for two streets, Fourteenth, from Howard to Davenport, will be paved with asphalt, with six-foot brick gutters, against the protest of Councilman Brucker, Howard street, from Ninth to Sixteenth, will be paved with Furlington brick block.

The Berka ordinance to levy a tax on subways and alley viaducts was laid over one week, as was the ordinance to confine all householders and builders to the lot limits for acreways and steps, and also the matter of naming some authority to O. K. appraisers' bills.

Dr. Connell's ordinance to create the office of assistant city veterinarian and slaughter house inspector was postponed until January. If it is put through then it will be to create the office and have the salary of $125 a month from the general fund, instead of having the inspector collect fees from slaughter house owners. The vote on a motion to recommend for passage was a tie, 6 to 6.

NATURALIZATIONS ARE UNDONE

Pair of Nance County Neighbors are Proven to Have Secured Their Papers Illegally.

Peter Johnson and Hans Anderson of Nance county will have to defer their voting privileges as American citizens for a while longer according to a decree just issued in the United States district court.

Their naturalization papers have been canceled on account of irregularity and are declared vitally defective, null and void.

The trouble originates with their first petition for naturalization, which should be signed by two witnesses already citizens of the United States. It appears that Peter Johnson and Hans Anderson had kindly and in a neighborly way signed each other's petition for naturalization before either of them had qualified as legal subjects of Uncle Sam.

It was shown that there was no intent as fraud, but that the petition had been signed in ignorance of the law, and the two disfranchised men are freely willing to have the mistake or error rectified and have surrendered their certificates for cancellation. They will have the matter fixed up and will be furnished with gilt-edged certificates of naturalization before the next county election in the fall of 1910.
