Thus far the entire political machinery of age, is survived by his wife and an American flag would long since have been had been in the hands of a certain aristocracy based on birth, wea'th and political traditions. Every state had its political subsidies. It has tried mail contracts, and families and circles, in the highest society, which controlled the opinions of the respective parties or factions. There was among the people.

One wing of the aristocracy became more and more impatient with the radicalism of the people, more and more disgusted with France and the French sympathizers, more and more inclined to return to a love of England and a reverence for English institutions. At the head of this faction was John Adams, who became president in 1797. Thomas Jefferson. The federalists, led by Hamilton and Adams, firmly and sincerely believed that Jefferson and his republicans would wreck the government, destroy religion, confiscate property, and repeat in America what the terror had-been in France. The republicans were as firmly convinced that the federalists contemplated the overthrowing of the republic and the establishment of a nonarchy. Each party believing that the life of the republic depended upon its sucess, the battle raged fiercely. When Washington left the presidency the flood of angry political passions so long restrained by his majestic personality burst forth. The federalists had possession of ongress by a narrow margin, and the split between Adams and Hamilton early manifested itself. Jefferson was the acknowledged leader of the republicans, and Burr was prominent only as a supporter of the

The republicans did not sympathize with France and refused to vote for the equipment to prosecute a war. The republican press sympathized with France, and many oposition papers were conducted by foreigners. Whereupon the Alien act was passed, giving the president the right to will. This was followed by the Sedition act, which prescribed severe penalties for uttering or publishing libels upon the government, the president, or officers in authority. This gave the federal courts prisdiction over political libel cases, and The federal authorities began to enforce the law with rigor, and the whole country was plunged into a terrific political battle. executive possessed of such a thirst he of that day, but it was enough to put Lyon buried with its bones. in jail for four months. The National Intelligencer reported, without comment, the fact that the speaker had made an error in announcing the vote on a question of adjournment, and had been corrected by a For that heinous offense the editor, Mr. Smith, was barred from the house and refussed admittance to the galleries. The speaker said to him. "In my opinion your conduct has had no other object than to disgrace me and the government. The object of my order was to prevent you from giving any further statements of the procedings of the house. You must not discuss any pending business and must make no report of a proceeding until the house has finally passed upon it." The house divided equally on a motion to readmit Smith to the galleries and the speaker cast the Young swells of the rich the republican candidates were tied. The tion to the two highest names on the list the federalist majority in the house was forced to choose between two radical republican candidates. Jefferson was feared the more, and a conspiracy to elect Burr was concocted, with Sedgwick as one of its leaders. The house went into continnous session to ballot for president. Eight states voted for Jefferson, eight for Burr and two were blank, there being an even division in the delegations from Vermont and Maryland. The speaker tried many times to break into the program with other business, and to throw the advantage to Burr, but without avail. One republican member who was very III, was carried to the house three miles through a heavy snow storm, but he did not falter. Finally, James A. Bayard of Delaware, founder of a great political family, deserted the Scorwick hours and voted for Jefferson, thereby ending the contest after thirty hours.

After it had become apparent that the republicans would control the next administration, President Adams resolved to save the union if he could. The Alien and Sedition laws were to expire by limitation with the Adams administration. But Adams had recourse to his power of appointment. A new judicial bill was passed increasing he attitude of the administration toward the federal judiciary and Adams appointed none but strong federalists to the bench. Then he named John Marshall to be chief justice of the supreme court, thereby assuring the control of the final supreme power to the conservatives. Marshall sat on the bench for thirty-four years and imprison and deport aliens practically at wrought mightily. He found the constitution an uninterpreted document which was accorded neither respect nor fear. Pay-as-you-enter Cars

In view of the fact that this Company will place Pay-As-You-Enter cars on the Farnam line within a few days, we want to say a few words to passengers on the subject.

Pay-As-You-Enter cars differ from other cars in that the passenger pays his fare to the conductor on the rear platform as he enters the car, obtaining at the same time a transfer, if one is desired; also in the fact that there are two separate doors at the rear of the car, one for the entrance of passengers and one for the exit, and that the door at the front end of the car is used as an exit only.

The advantages of this type of car are:

First: That the conductor is on the rear platform at all times in a position to see that the step is clear before he gives the signal to start the car, thus insuring passengers against accident;

Second: Avoiding the necessity of the conductor pushing his way through a crowded car, jostling passengers in doing so;

Third: The cars load and unload simultaniously, thereby avoiding the usual delay at busy corners.

Fourth: Avoiding the possibility of a second demand for fare, inasmuch as passengers pay when they enter, and there can be no question of their having paid.

The Pay-As-You-Enter system has been put in successful operation in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and other large cities of the country, and is well liked wherever introduced.

We ask the public to co-operate with us in having their fare ready before they board the cars.
