WILDCAT MUFFIN

Thirty-Five Pound Kitten Invades Expo's Domestic Science Kitchen.

RECESS IS DECLARED AT ONCE

Doughty Instructor Entertains Forr Feline Guest Until Keeper Man Comes with "Jewelry" and Leads Pet-Away to Cage,

The call of the succulent corn muffin a expressed in the domestic science depart ment of the corn show proved too much for Josephine, the hybrid-wild cat freak on exhibition in the "Barnyard" as the exposition's midway is known.

Josephine alighted on her softly badded feet in the middle of the kitchen foundry and purred in her dearest mezzo-soprano Oh, feathers! How they did fly.

Domestic scientists in white caps and aprons fied in fright from the room. Screams, squeals and giggles pierced the air. Crab ments were left to burn, but Josephine, thirty-five pounds of electricity and steely sinuous muscles, neatly done up in pretty spotted velvet furs, became the empress of the kitchen for one bris-

"Now girls don't be foolish," sounded the voice of the instructor in an almost chiding tone. "Why you girls have been scared by one little pretty kitten." The doughty instructor, armed with broom, tried some diplomatic coaking. "Nice kitty. Want a muffin?"

Kitty did and kitty got it, teo, from respectful distance of ten feet. The wild cat swallowed the delicacy with due appreciation and arching her back purred some more for her admiring and fearing audience. Then the keeper came along with collar and chain and the show was over. Josephine, the adventursome kitten, is the offspring of a South American occlot, which is a small jaguar, and a big Russian house cat. Those who have seen Josie when she is riled aver that there is also a predominating admixture of buzz-saw.

Ice Trust Case to Jury Today

Attorney for State Says Combine Has Sixty Million in Paper and Twenty Thousand Cash Capital,

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 .- A jury will decide omorrow whether the American Ice comcany shall be dissolved for conspiracy in restraint of trade or shall continue its services to $,000,000 consumers. John B. Stanchfield summed up for the defense today and James W. Osborne for the began his closing argument late

Mr. Stanchfield laid stress today on the size of the company, which, he said, made it a quasi public institution, insamuch as ce is virtually a necessity of life. "The trial bristies with evidence," he continued. "that there is no monopoly of the supply and, in view of increasing arificial production, can never be." Mr. Osborne argued that no company should serve 8,000,000 customers with a necessity of life. A thousand dealers in competition were not too many, he thought, for so huge a market. "This corporation," he said, "had $60,-000,000 of paper and a cash capital of only 130,000. Then they go sheed and offer $40,000,000 of paper to secure $40,000,000 of ompetition and ask the public to pay dividends on the wind and water. And what is their defense? That it was a foolish thing to try to create a monopoly in ice, because it could not be done."

100,000 Acres Irrigated Land

The Government Irrigation Project in the Belle Fourche Valley of South Dakota will water 100,000 acres of fertile land.

This land is open for settlement under the United States Homestead and Reclamation Laws - a splendid opportunity to secure a home and have your crops pay for it.

Land in the Belle Fourche Valley has been under private irrigation for many years. Oats run 40 to 100 bushels per acre, while from 30 to 60 bushels of other grain may easily be grown. Alfalfa, potatoes, sugar beets, hardy fruits and garden truck are exceedingly profitable.

Native hay sells for a high price, for the Belle Fourche Valley is surrounded north, east and west by vast ranges that afford pasturage to huge herds of cattle and sheep. The Belle Fourche Valley is situated near the best markets of the middle west, including those of the mining towns of the Black district. The demand for fruit, garden truck, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, etc., is constant. All such products bring big profits. For accurate and reliable information about how to obtain some of this land apply to the Chicago & North Western Railway for a copy of the Belle Fourche Valley booklet, free on request. With it we include booklets describing the best countries for the homesceker to be found in the United States—the profitable cut-over timber lands of Wisconsin—the dry farming methods and irrigation on government lands in Nebraska and Wyoming-and how to secure a U.S. Government homestead.
