One Enormous Waste. "A number of years ago I pointed out, on the basis of chemical analysis, the enormous waste of corn stored in the state. Prof. Smith of the Nebraska experiment station has calculated that if all the corn were properly cut and field cured, the feeding value of the corn stored would be $3,000,000 per year above the feeding value of the corn fields as used for winter pasture.

Amount of Farm Training. "There are about 13,000 farms in Nebraska. There are now approximately 100 young farmers graduated each year from the university School of Agriculture. If all of these young men should live and continue in active service for fifty years, at the end of that period, assuming that the number of farmers did not increase, less than one-twentieth of the farmers of the state would have had training in our school of agriculture. We expect the number of students to increase greatly.

Habit's Chain. Certain Habits Unconsciously Formed and Hard to Break. An ingenious philosopher estimates that the amount of will power necessary to break a life-long habit would, if it could be transformed, lift a weight of many tons. It sometimes requires a higher degree of heroism to break the chains of a pernicious habit than to lead a fortune hunter in a bloody battle. A lady writes from an Indiana town: "From my earliest childhood I was a lover of coffee. Before I was out of my teens I was a miserable dyspeptic, suffering terribly at times with my stomach. "It was convinced that it was coffee that was causing the trouble and get I could not deny myself a cup for breakfast. At the age of 24 I was in very poor health. Indeed, my sister told me I was in danger of becoming a coffee drunkard. "But I never could give up drinking coffee for breakfast although it kept me constantly ill, until I tried Postum. I learned to make it properly according to directions, and now we can hardly do without Postum for breakfast, and care nothing at all for coffee. "I am no longer troubled with dyspepsia, do not have spells of suffering with my stomach that used to trouble me so when I drank coffee. "Look in page for the little book, 'The Road to Well-being.' "There's a Reason." Buy read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

philosophy—without engendering in their souls a determination to obtain freedom, or to die. When I hear lawyers, bankers, business men or clergymen, as I occasionally do, claim that we ought to train the coming generation to become almost exclusively skillful farmers or skilled artisans, I feel like replying that they would deny to the coming generation what they themselves have enjoyed. We must extend the knowledge of agricultural and mechanical arts; we must recognize that the average young person is fitted only for some industrial pursuit; we must recognize that a healthy agricultural industrial population is the basis of our prosperity; but we must also recognize that we cannot attain to a high civilization without teaching in our public schools and colleges all of those things which are contributing to the best civilization of the world. "I believe that, as never before, the metropolis and the capital of the state will join hands in an educational alliance, and that this educational alliance will be one of the most potent factors in bringing to pass the coming greatness of our state."

call and discuss such matters with him, complainant and Kavan wanted him to file the complaint. After Kavan had agreed to file the complaint he failed to come back to Wappich. Mayor Dahman made a short statement in which he said none of these complaints had reached him and that at any time he would be glad to have Elmer Thomas, Thomas, he said, had been before the board frequently and had always received courteous treatment. In discussing the purchase of beer by Harry Stone and Kavan and Erdman, the mayor said such a thing was possible, but he himself had never gone around trying to get someone to sell him a glass of beer in violation of the law. "If I had," said the mayor, "I would never have told it. There is nothing in my blood that would permit me to speak on a man who had done that for me." Each of the members of their board and Chief Donahue made statements of their willingness to enforce the law and of what was being done to that end. Attorney General Thompson sat with the governor on the case and the executive office was crowded. The hearing lasted until about 5 o'clock. The governor said there would be no decision tonight.
