Motorman Unskilled with New Brake—Motormen on the Farnam street line, are having considerable difficulty with the new power brake cars and mistakes in handling these brakes have tied up the line several times lately. Monday night the brakes became frozen to the wheels and the line was blocked for an hour in the evening. Just as the largest number of people wished to get home to their evening meal.

Metal Workers Entertain Chief—F. L. Seabrook, president of the National Sheet Metal Workers' association, was entertained Monday night at a banquet at the Rome by the Omaha association. The organization is composed of the manufacturers of articles in sheet metal and in Omaha there are twenty-five members. At the banquet there was a number of guests from South Omaha and Council Bluffs. President Seabrook is returning east from a western tour of organization.

Chicago Firm to Fix Building for Bank—Bernard Rind of the Rind & Nilsen company of Chicago, is in Omaha looking over the new Omaha National Bank building, formerly the New York Life. The Chicago company is to have the job of shooting up the building in any manner necessary while walls are being torn out and the interior rearranged. A permit has not yet been taken out for this work, which is expected to begin within ten days, but the cost of making the necessary changes to suit the needs of the bank will reach a substantial sum.

Movements of Federal Court Officers—United States Marshal W. F. Warner, District Clerk R. C. Hoyt and Circuit Clerk George Thummel have returned from Grand Island, where they went to open the term of the federal courts Monday. There were no cases ready for trial and the term adjourned until a later date, to be designated by Judge T. C. Munger, when it shall appear that there is a need for a term of the courts there. Judge W. H. Munger will return from St. Louis Sunday, where he has been sitting as a member of the United States circuit court of appeals for the Eighth district.

City Attorney Burnam and his first assistant, I. J. Dunn, have gone to St. Louis. Today they expect to appear for the city of Omaha in the so-called electric light case. This is the action in which Judge Keeble held the Omaha Electric Light and Power company had a right to sell power from their lines and enjoined the city from cutting wires.

Judge Munger in United States district court reversed the ruling of Judge Keeble and the company appealed to the circuit court of appeals. It is before this court, sitting at St. Louis, Monday. Dunn and Burnam will present their argument on behalf of the city. The two attorneys expect to be gone until the end of the week.

SOME DAIRYMEN STUBBORN Minority Resents All Attempts to Compel Them to Raise Standard of Conditions.

Of the eighty or more dairymen who deliver milk in Omaha and are likely to apply for licenses for 1910, about sixty have been reported to Health Commissioner Connel as entitled to licenses.

The dairy inspectors attached to the health commissioner's office say that most of the dairymen are making a commendable effort to keep their milk houses and cow barns clean and sanitary. Some of them have been erecting new buildings. There are a few, however, who act stubbornly and resent all attempts to compel them to raise the standard of their places. These men are going to find difficulty in securing new licenses, say the officials.

ADAMS PICKED AS SLAYER

Young Man Arrested Here Identified by Kansas City.

SAID TO HAVE SLAIN SPANGLER

He and Earl Brown Suspects in Holdups in Omaha and Kawville and Wanted by Delegation from Latter City.

Detective Wilson, S. W. Spangler, A. Ackerman, Cash Welch, Joseph Shannon, Norman Woodson and George H. McCrary, all of Kansas City, are in the city for the purpose of identifying John Adams and Earl Brown, two young men now under the bonds of the district court of Douglas county, on the charge of robbery.

Scarcely had the men seen the prisoners than Mr. Ackerman picked out Adams and identified him as being the man who fired the shot that instantly killed M. A. Spangler in a saloon holdup in Kansas City on November 22.

Ackerman was in the saloon at the time of the robbery and followed Adams from the saloon as Adams was making his escape. When Adams was lined up with five others in Captain Savage's office, Ackerman selected him at once and said "this is my man."

George H. McCrary was robbed in Kansas City of a valuable gold watch and some money and he is positive that Earl Brown is the man who held the gun on him. Earl Brown is supposed to be the little man in the holdup cases in Kansas City and Omaha; Adams is a much taller man.

Held for Offenses Here.

Adams and Brown are the fellows who were bound over as having held up Marvin Kohm on Twenty-fifth avenue, December 9, but nearly all of the money and private property of Kohm were taken. They are also the pair held on the charge of having shot E. S. Ashcroft of 1811 Chicago street, when Ashcroft refused to stand and be robbed. They are held to the Douglas county district court on bonds of $500 each, and it is likely the authorities will not allow them to be taken to Kansas City, as their conviction here is regarded as almost sure. They were arrested in Omaha by Detectives Mitchell, Cunningham, Rink and Davis.

The Omaha police firmly believe Adams and Brown are the men who have been guilty of so many daring holdups. Kansas City went through the same experience before the men left that city and they evidently renewed their operations in Omaha.

S. W. Spangler, son of the man who was killed in Kansas City, was shot in both arms at the time his father was killed. M. A. Spangler, the murdered man, tried to get a drop on the man who held him up but had to hold the robber's hands and the revolver the bandit held was discharged, the bullet entering the heart of the proprietor of the saloon. S. W. Spangler made a desperate effort to shoot the man who killed his father, but he was disabled by the shots that entered his arms.

Funston May Take Command of Omaha Post

Regarded as Probable Successor to General Morton as Head of Department of the Missouri.

Brigadier General Frederick Funston, United States army, now commandant of the Army Schools at Fort Leavenworth, may become commanding officer of the Department of the Missouri upon the retirement of Brigadier General Morton on March 15.

General Funston is at present the ranking brigadier general of the army and his two year tour of duty as commandant of the Army Schools has about expired, and some suitable command will have to be found for him.

Major General W. H. Carter probably will be given command of the Department of the Lakes and Major General Fred D. Grant will be assigned to his old command, the Department of the East, with headquarters in New York, upon Major General Leonard Wood assuming the duties of chief of staff of the army.

This would practically leave but one recourse for assignment of a brigadier general, Funston, and that to the Department of the Missouri, which is the second ranking department in the United States.

Some Things You Want to Know

Turbulent Central America—Debt-Ridden Honduras.

Of all the countries of the new world Honduras finds itself the deepest in debt per capita and the least able to meet its indebtedness. In fact, France and Portugal, the two nations of the globe which show a greater per capita indebtedness than Honduras. Apparently this little country owes more than a hundred million dollars, three-fourths of which is interest that has accumulated since 1873. It happened in this way. When the Central American fell in pieces in 1827 each of the constituent states assumed its proportion of the general indebtedness. Honduras never paid its portion, and in 1867 went into the market to borrow money to build a transcontinental railroad. Before the new loan could be floated arrangements had to be made to satisfy the old indebtedness. The upshot of the matter was that Honduras fell into the hands of shysters, who loaned it money and took everything it had as security. Twice more Honduras borrowed money, also for the purpose of completing an interoceanic railway, but nearly all of the money and private property of Honduras was loaned to the shysters instead of going into the building of a railway.

At last Honduras threw up its hands, declaring that it had gotten no benefit from the loans and that it would not satisfy the bonds. The British Parliament was appealed to for an investigation and soon found the shysters so tainted with fraud that it could only throw them out of court, so to speak. Since then many efforts have been made to effect a settlement, but no mutually satisfactory basis has been found, although the bonds once sold for 5 per cent of their face value, with no allowance for accumulated interest.

If Honduras were to pay this whole debt with the accumulated interest it would amount to $160 per capita. Our own debt, upon such a per capita basis, would amount to more than twelve billion dollars. Heavily handicapped by its practical, if not actual, repudiation of this debt, Honduras finds itself in still worse straits from the fact that its export trade is still awaiting development where one has been improved. While there has been complaint among the Hondurans over the exaggerated reports of their political disturbances that are circulated in the United States, they heartily desire the introduction of a more equitable trade, there are few places in the world not willing to profit by the wonder-working power of Yankee brains, capital and grit.

A remarkable plant that grows in Honduras is the plantain, which is not unlike the banana. One authority estimates that an acre of plantain produces a quantity of food equal to 125 acres of wheat, or 400 acres of potatoes. Flour is made from green plantains, and both the ripe and green ones are good to eat in their natural state. The sap makes a fine indelible ink. It is estimated that the average bunch of plantains will weigh, seventy pounds and that an acre of the soil will produce more than 150 tons of edible food in a single season. Banana growing is said to yield a profit of $50 per acre for the first year and $80 for the following ten years. Honduras seems to offer splendid opportunities for the capitalist who has the nerve to exempt him from liability to military service.

The first ice cream factory ever built in Central America was erected at San Pedro Sula by a Mr. Troy, a native of Georgia. Shortly after it started there was a down-pour of rain in the very height of the dry season, and the factory was ruined. The natives thought the ice cream factory had changed the climate of the country, so they immediately sent petitions to the president of the republic, asking him to revoke the ice cream concession. Troy had with him a wild Irishman who had been employed in the factory, and he was soon making from $10 to $15 a day from his ingenuity and industry.

The Bay Islands, belonging to Honduras, are said to be the nearest known approach to a lazy man's paradise. Coconut growing constitutes practically the only industry, and according to an enthusiastic all-arounder who has seen a piece of ground, plant the nuts twenty feet apart and wait five years for results. After that he is fixed for life, with an income safer than government bonds. The nuts are never picked, out as they mature they drop off, and this shower of fruit goes on month after month for a lifetime. Bananas, pineapples, mangoes, plums and oranges grow without the slightest cultivation.

While coconut-growing may have some disadvantages not enumerated in the above prospectus, it is undoubtedly an industry of great possibilities. The by-products of this tropical luxury are used in every conceivable way. Its sap and meat provide the nation with delicious food and drink. Its dried meat is called copra. The shells are valuable as household utensils, and can be made into many kinds of ornaments. The tree provides lumber for the construction of houses, and the foliage makes an excellent roofing. There are eighty-three distinct uses to which the substance of this wonderful tree may be put, ranging from the manufacture of toothpicks to the preparation of dye and hair oil.

The custom of giving concessions, a practice which recently caused so much trouble for Mr. Zelaya of Nicaragua, obtains also in Honduras, though it may not be abused as it was in the neighboring state. One thing Honduras has long desired is railway connection throughout the republic. With all the enormous national debt, made to secure a railroad, the capital city of Honduras still remains without rail connections with the seaports and the journey must be made by automobile or other conveyance. It is only in recent years that even a good public highway has been open.

The result is that the Hondurans will give almost anything that is demanded to get a railroad. Recently a concession of 2,000 acres of land was made for every mile of railroad the concessionaire would build in one of the provinces. As the route for which the concession was granted presents no serious engineering difficulties, and the land through which it passes is fine banana land, capable of being made to yield a profit of $60 per acre per year, the concessionaire may secure for himself a fixed income of $100,000 a year for every mile of railroad he builds, even though the line yields him no net profits during the period he is allowed to operate it under the concession.

In another instance a concession of 25,000 acres of banana land was granted to an American for an annual rental of less than 2 cents per acre, the concession to last for a long period, and the concessionaire to have the privilege of buying the land at unimproved land prices at the end of that period. Honduras well realizes that its concessions are tremendously liberal, and that they offer opportunities for the making of great fortunes, but it also understands that the American who invests his money in tropical America unless he are assured of great returns. Unlimited natural wealth is of no account unless there is capital to develop it.

British Honduras is not associated with Honduras itself, except in name. It was long a part of the crown, and ceded to Honduras, as the name might imply, it is British territory by reason of the English lumbermen who settled there a hundred years ago. They saw the opportunity to get themselves under the protection of the mother country by claiming the territory and the name of the crown, and asserted British title to it before Monroe delivered his celebrated proclamation. The territory extends as far back into Guatemala as the lumbermen could reach in their quest for mahogany. Today the section of country lying close to the coast has been stripped of its trees, but there are still plenty of them inland. Belize, the capital of the colony, continues to be the foremost mahogany market of the world. Other precious woods are shipped in large quantities.

Many people have supposed that mahogany is a wood of very slow growth and some of the best writers on tropical matters have accepted this theory. The error is due to the difference in time in which the rings on these trees are formed. In America and Europe one ring a year is formed and it was naturally presumed that the same applied to the mahogany tree. As a matter of fact it adds three rings a year, and the tree whose rings indicated that it was 100 years old was, as a matter of fact, only thirty-three years old. The high price of mahogany is due to the infrequent occurrence of the tree and the dangerous swamps in which it grows. A single tree is often worth thousands of dollars. Most of the work of cutting, hauling and getting the log to market is done by night, the heat of the day being too intense for such operations.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Tomorrow—Turbulent Central America VII—Fertile Costa Rica.

Local Dahman men have a hunch from Lincoln that Governor Shallenberger is to try for the senatorial nomination, an agreement that the Oregon plan shall govern among democratic candidates, whether strictly legal or not. They have learned that pressure is being brought to bear on him, not only by democrats of his particular brand, but by what is known as the "university crowd." This term is intended to include all the men connected with the university as professors whose support Bryan lost by his opposition to their pension bill, but also all the alumni these professors could influence.

Senator Ferguson has never made a secret of the fact that he fell in love with official life in Washington while serving as congressman, and it is pointed out that he has qualifications to cut some figure in the senatorial set if he can break in. He is not only a banker, but is a gentleman farmer on a scale that nets him considerable profit every year.

While the Dahman people are at present going ahead with their plans on the supposition that Shallenberger is the man they will have to defeat in the primaries, they are holding in view an alternative plan should he enter the senatorial fight. This latter plan is that the Douglas county senator, Hitchcock, for congress if he insists on running again—and always Loebek looms on the horizon.

LAYMEN LAY MORE PLANS

Committees Busy on Arrangements for Big Missionary Convention in March.

Further plans for the convention in Omaha, March 18-20, of the Laymen's Missionary movement society were made Tuesday afternoon at a luncheon held at the Young Men's Christian association by local laymen. Clemons C. Chase presided.

The following general committees were appointed to have charge of the convention: Publicity, Harry Fischer, C. A. Mangum; committee forms, R. E. Leonard, Dr. W. H. Alwine; statistics, E. H. Westfield, W. F. Harford; educational, J. H. Franklin; deputations, Henry F. Kleser; entertainment, W. S. Sinschlag. Factors of the various Omaha churches have been commissioned to appoint co-operative committees.

There were about forty men present at the luncheon, large delegations coming from Council Bluffs and South Omaha.

LOBECK OUT FOR CONGRESS

City Comptroller Will Run if Hitchcock Tries for the Senate.

LEAVES DAHLMAN FOR GOVERNOR Friends of the Mayor Propose to Re-Heve Shallenberger Will Get in the Senate Marathon Instead of Governor.

City Comptroller Lobeck will be the next democratic candidate for congress in this district, if Gilbert M. Hitchcock starts in the senatorial race, as he says he will. While the city comptroller is still coy about admitting that he will get in the race when the sitting congressman seeks higher honors, he does not deny.

In this connection, friends of Lobeck recall that he had the nomination cinched back in 1896, when the silver republicans and the populists named him, but got out of the running at the time for Edgar Howard, on the urgent solicitation of W. J. Bryan and other democratic leaders. Now, if the chance offers, his friends are going to insist that Lobeck have his whirl. And, it is violating no secret to say that he would much rather prefer the congressional to the gubernatorial nomination.

City hall gossipers profess to believe that both Governor Shallenberger and Mayor Dahman would be glad to see Lobeck sidetracked from the gubernatorial fight.

FOG FATAL TO SWITCHMAN

So Dense Samuel J. Austin Could Not See Cars. LIES NEAR DEATH IN HOSPITAL. Miss Myrtle Douglas, Actress, Sustains Broken Hand by Fall. Also Due to Fog in Railroad Yard.

In the veil of fog that hung over the city Tuesday morning two accidents occurred—both in railroad yards near the river, where the fog was heaviest—which will mean the death of a man and the helplessness of a young woman for some time.

Samuel J. Austin, 238 Cuming street, a switchman employed by the Burlington, was crushed between two cars near the Council Bluffs transfer station and lies at Mercy hospital, Council Bluffs, near death. Miss Myrtle Douglas, leading lady with the "Bunch of Kids" Theatrical company, in her haste to catch a train, ran against the rear of a Hook Island passenger coach and fell heavily to the platform, receiving injuries that kept her in Omaha for the day, although the troupe proceeded on to Chicago.

Austin's accident was particularly tragic. All the employees in the switching yards had been warned of danger owing to the density of the fog, and Austin has always been known as a cautious man.

While waiting for a switch engine to run down the tracks with some extra cars he was caught between the ends of two coaches as they passed on the switch. He did not notice there was not enough space for him to stand and let the cars go by.

At Mercy hospital no hope is expressed for him by Dr. J. H. Cole. The right arm was crushed to a pulp, the right leg mangled from foot to thigh and the man's ribs were crushed so that they protruded through the flesh.

Austin has a wife and little daughter, 5 years of age. He is about 30 years of age. Miss Douglas was picked up in an unconscious condition at Union station after her fall and carried to the woman's resting room. Dr. S. H. Smith was called. The girl's hand was broken and she has been in a highly nervous condition. She will join her company in Chicago, Wednesday.
