Lyle Abbott Says Some Real Fancy Financing Was Done.

HE AND HIS FRIENDS LEARN A LOT

Messrs. Cockerill, Head and Smith Show Them Some Things They Did Not Know Before in Business Details.

Lyle L. Abbott, counsel for Marmaduke Hillman and Leonard M. Allen, in the suit to have a receiver appointed for the Long Distance Independent Telephone company, tells the story of the suit offhand, much more interestingly than the court petition does.

In the beginning, Mr. Abbott says, the present suit has nothing whatever to do with the proposed reorganization of the Independent Telephone company of Omaha, except that they touch at one point.

"One of the ten contracts spoken of in our petition is with the Omaha company," says Mr. Abbott, "and it is about the best contract for such purposes that I ever saw. It was secured while Stowe was president of the Omaha company, and by virtue of that contract the representative of the New State company had a suite of rooms in the Independent company's building and from there the New State Telephone company is transacting its business in this section."

Getting down to the matter of the petition for a receiver, Mr. Abbott grows exceedingly interesting, and it is easy to see that he feels in his soul some slight admiration for the series of movements by which his clients and other were left high and dry, helpless and lonely, on a non-money bearing island; plucked and deserted, as alleged.

Back at the Source.

"When Charles G. Cockerill, Charles H. Smith and M. M. Head began their campaign they were in control of the Independent Telephone company of Omaha," says Mr. Abbott. "Then they organized the Long Distance Independent Telephone company, a Nebraska corporation. The preferred stock was secured with ten independent telephone companies, valuable contracts, as we maintain, the one with the Omaha company being worth hundreds of thousands of dollars."

"They had provided that there should be two kinds of stock, preferred and common. The preferred stock was of two classes—A and B. The holders of common stock were to have full control of all the affairs of the company, and this common stock Cockerill, Head and Smith kept for themselves."

"After the ten contracts with independent companies were secured the Central Construction company was organized under the laws of Nebraska. Then Cockerill, Head and Smith, as the board of directors of the Long Distance Independent Telephone company entered into a contract with the Central Construction company, whose board of directors also consisted of Cockerill, Head and Smith. Mr. Cockerill was president of both companies and Mr. Smith was secretary of both."

Proceeds to Business.
"Well, the construction company went ahead and built lines, buildings and all that sort of thing under the contract, and operated the same, investing large sums of money and earning other large sums, which were duly accounted for to Cockerill, Head and Smith as the Long Distance Independent Telephone company."

company, all three being present. At this meeting a resolution was passed offering to turn over to the Central Construction company all the property, contracts, assets, bills due, everything—if the Central Construction company would take them and call it quits."

"Then Cockerill, Head and Smith, adjourning as the Long Distance Independent Telephone company, after passing that resolution by unanimous vote, met as the Central Construction company, and by a similar unanimous vote Cockerill, Head and Smith accepted the offer of the Long Distance Independent Telephone company and took over its business. This meeting was probably held in a different corner of the same room, but, of course, that's immaterial."

Cockerill, Head and Smith.
"Then, having so smoothly acquired the property and contracts of the Long Distance Independent Telephone company, without the knowledge of my clients or other stockholders, who had preferred stock, Cockerill, Head and Smith, with this million dollars' worth of property in their possession, transferred the same to the New State Telephone company, an Iowa corporation. The men in control of this company and constituting its board of directors were Cockerill, Head and Smith."

"Now, we allege that Cockerill, Head and Smith knew all the time that Cockerill, Head and Smith were shifting that property around, through themselves and by themselves, in a manner not allowed or countenanced by law." (Mr. Abbott used stronger "legat" language than this, he it said.)

"Mr. Abbott's clients then, learning of these transfers, made demand they be set aside and canceled. These demands, sent by registered mail, were ignored. Finally, Mr. Abbott secured a look at the books and made copies of the minutes, which he will use in the suit."

Lillian Bell Sues Beauty Shop Doctors

Woman Wants Five Thousand Dollars Damages for Use of Her Picture by the System.

Like other businesses, that of beauty culture by correspondence, has its vices and vicissitudes, and one of these afflictions has just overtaken "the Madame Josephine Boyd System."

The "system" has been sued for $5,000 damages in district court by Mrs. Lillian Bell. Mrs. Bell says the "system" used her picture in a catalogue or prospectus and denominated her "assistant in hair arrangements and coiffures."

Mrs. Bell declares that she never had any connection whatsoever with the Madame Boyd System, never was assistant in hair arrangements, never assisted in any lesson in beauty culture, and was never even in its place of business.

For having used her photograph (thus, Mrs. Bell wishes damages), contending that the publication of her picture with the asserts Messrs. Cockerill, Head and Smith were the busy people, Mr. Abbott remarked, apparently as a relief from the heaviness of the foregoing:

"Having transferred all the property and wiped out the company, Cockerill, Head and Smith added insult to injury by writing my clients and requesting them to pay the corporation tax levied in Nebraska. It was not paid, however, and the governor will probably soon proclaim the charter forfeited under the law."

giving remarks of the catalogue constituted a libel.

The beauty culture school did not forth its merits in uncertain terms and the idea which a credulous reader would derive would be that she could easily become lovelier than Venus and have Helen of Troy hiding her head in a sack.

James W. Elwood and Harry B. Browne are named as the proprietors of the "Madame Boyd System," which is a corporation.

HISTORIC SIXTH CAVALRY BACK FROM PHILIPPINES

Famous Old Regiment Goes to Des Moines After Third Term in Service in the East.

The Sixth United States cavalry, a regiment with over 300 battles and skirmishes to its credit, is expected to arrive at Fort Des Moines from San Francisco Monday or Tuesday, after having completed three years' service in the Philippines.

This makes the third tour of duty for the Sixth cavalry in the Philippines and China. The regiment was organized in the fall of 1861 and was then known as the "Baby Regiment," from the fact that the average of the men comprising the original regiment was younger than any other regiment in the army.

Among the men who enlisted as private soldiers in the regiment in 1861 were Adna R. Chaffee, now lieutenant general, retired; Samuel M. Whiteside, retired as brigadier general a few years ago and now deceased, and a host of retired colonels and majors.

The regiment engaged in practically all the great battles of the Potomac army during the civil war, including the Peninsula campaign, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness and Appomattox. Following the war the regiment engaged in numerous Indian campaigns in the southwest, including the Geronimo campaign; was at the battle of Wounded Knee and was one of the first of the regular regiments engaged in the Cuban campaign during the Spanish-American war. The regiment was also engaged in some of the earliest campaigns against the Filipino insurgents and was on the China expedition sent to the relief of the besieged legations. During this campaign the regiment was commanded by the late Brigadier General Theodore F. Wint, formerly commander of the Department of the Missouri.

It was the Sixth cavalry that first inaugurated the fancy drill tournaments that have since become so popular with the regular army.

The regiment has been in continuous active service since its organization, forty-eight years ago.

Whistle to Save Pupils in Storm

Plan Proposed by Woman's Club of Announcing No School in Worst Weather.

If the Omaha Woman's club has its way the closing of the city schools in stormy weather will be announced to the pupils by the blowing of whistles early in the morning in time to save useless trips in bitter weather and unnecessary expenditure of car fare.

The idea was originated by Miss Margaret McCarthy of the Pacific school, and it has been taken up by the home economics committee of the Woman's club. The club proposes to suggest the plan to the Board of Education.

The recent storm which caused the closing of the schools for a day placed emphasis on the value of such a scheme.

Many pupils suffered frost-bitten ears and frozen fingers to reach the school houses only to find them closed for the day.

The club women propose that the Board of Education get the industrial plants of Omaha and South Omaha to sound a distinctive signal from the whistles. It is believed that the wide area over which the whistles of the city are distributed would permit the signal to reach every home.
