But if the scene is not new and a great deal of the comedy of the offercomes from mistaken identities, these old ingredients are mixed in new proporions and rather newly flavored so that the whole is not hackneyed to the taste. The funniest thing in "The Matinee Idol" omes when Hopper is forced by circumstances to pretend to be a physician and is called upon to treat a youth who is shamming illness. The quack docr attributes his skill to mesmeric inence and there is, after a little more lemenstration, afforded the chance to bring in the charus for an hypnotic dance, which is one of the prettiest things in the nelange of farce, comedy and singing.

Musically, "A Matinee Idol" is highly pleasing. There are an abundance of tune ful, catchy songs, with the inevitable whistling accompaniment from the high gods, and there are several soloists with sweet voices, chief of these being Miss Harriet Burt, a handsome young woman who commanded attention by her ward robe as well as by her physical and vocal charms. The depth of the back V in one of these gowns would make even Lotta Faust envious. There is much dancing through the comedy, Mr. Hopper cavorting with wonderful grace for his size and Miss Berta Mills, who also gang with a pure and expressive soprano voice, trips a most graceful toe.
