CHANGES ARE TO BE TRIED

Teams Will Be Used to Give a Practical Test of the Modifications Which May Be Suggested at Meeting.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.-According to letters and dispatches from the south, it will not be an entirely theoretical set of conditions which will confront the foot ball rules committee when it meets in this city next month. Prof. Dennis of Cornell, chairman of the committee, recently sent letters to all the members of the committee requesting them to name dates in February which would be agreeable to them as conference days. As yet he has not received enough replies to be able to fix on a date which will be convenient to a majority of the fourteen members of the committee. It is known, however, that the meeting will not be called until about the middle of next month.

the committee expect to conduct a series of experiments which will enable them to grasp in a practicable manner the effect of some of the proposed changes in the foot ball playing code. In past years when the foot ball rules committee has felt called upon to alter the code many of the changes were taken at their face value or on the recommendation of members who had witnessed a crude tryout of the proposed innovation. As a result it has sometimes happened that the change did not prove as satisfactory as had been hoped for, and in fact proved of little advantage. Unless the plans of the various members of the committee miscarry, this will not be the case at the coming meeting. While the proposed amendments which have been offered as a solution of the conditions which confront the game of football of today are radical in the extreme, the committee will not be obliged to discuss its In order that something concrete may be known of the working of the resultant plays under the proposed suggestions practicable tryouts on the foot ball field, with two college elevens as the means of the experiment. Since such a test could not be conducted on northern gridirons at this season of the year, the tryouts will be conducted on the foot ball fields of the far south, where weather conditions somewhat similar to a northern autumn preyail at the present time.
