Sixty-Four Prominent New Yorkers Accused of Taking Up Mineral Claims for Benefit of Two Corporations.

CHEVENNE, Wyo., Feb. 10 .- (Special.)-Contest cases involving nearly 10,000 acres of valuable coal lands in Big Horn county, Wyoming, valued at $1,500,000, will begin Friday in the Lander (Wyo.) United States land office, when sixty-four defendants appear to answer to summons filed by the government. The cases, which are the most important ever heard before a land office in this state, have attracted wide attention, not only on account of the large values involved, but also because some of New York's most prominent men are involved either as operators of the coal mines or entrymen on the coal lands, which the government alleges have been filed upon filegally.

The cases involve 9,500 acres of rich coal lands lying in the Gebo and Lander coal districts in Big Horn county, Wyoming, which the government alleges have been filed upon by false and dummy entrymen in a conspiracy to defraud the governmen for the benefit of the Owl Creek Coal company and the Northwestern Coal company, which are rumored to be connected with the Burlington railroad.

Value Million and a Half. Government experts have appraised these lands at a valuation of $150 per acre, which would make the total valuation involved in the cases nearly $1,500,000.

The cases now on trial have grown out of investigations which the government has been making for the last three years into the alleged fraudulent entries made on these lands in 1805, both criminal and civil actions having been filed by the gov- information concerning the results of the ernment.
