Mrs. R. A. Willis, the Omaha painter, whose copies at the World's fair were the only ones from Nebraska to find their way into the general art exhibit, has been inspired to paint corn as a result of her visits to the National Corn exposition and has already made several pictures.

One of these paintings is on display at the Commercial club, where the campaign for tested seed corn is being made. The pictpre shows several perfect ears which Mrs. Willis secured for models. She is now at work on a painting of the best bushel of corn at the corn exposition, which was bought by Arthur Capper of the Topeka Capital.
