The annual charter day barb-frat indoor athietic meet at the State university was won by nonfraternity men yesterday, by a score of 42 to 40. The absence of Sidney Collins from the shot-put event gave the monfraternity men a chance to take second place and win the contest. Collins claimed he was too ill to compete.

Two university records were broken in the shot-put, B. Funkhauser heaved the weight forty-four feet, three and one-half inches, this mark being three and a half inches better than the record put made by Sidney Collins last year.

In the high kick, Hansen raised the record mark by half an inch. going to nine feet, four and one-half inches. This mark is within three and a half inches of the world's record. Hansen tried for the world's record, but his kick, although going as high as nine feet eight inches, missed the leather plaster.

The big surprise of the meet was the defeat suffered by Swanson in the twenty-five-yard dash. Last year Swanson won that event with ease, and looked like a sure winner for this winter. He was defeated by May, a freshman athlete, who dashed the twenty-five yards in record time. Minor, a fast university sprinter failed to get a place in this event.

In the pole vault, Nelgraska'n two starvaulters, tied for first place at ten fee six inches. Both were out of form an their exhibition was not up to the standard that they have set in the past.

"MAN IN LOWER TEN" IS SELECTED

Absorbing Tale of Love and Mystery Complicated with Crime and Adventure, Will be Given Our Renders.

"The Man In Lower Ten," by Mary Staircase," and published by the Bobbs Merrill company, Indianapolis, will be pubished as a serial story by The Bee.

"The Circular Staircase" was one of the happy surprises of 1908. Here was a mystery by an author practically unknown, which combined elements of humor and mystery in such entertaining proportions that the reading public was immediately captivated. The combination was somethirg new, piquant and different, like the Irst taste of grape fruit dressed with oil. In "The Man In Lower Ten" Mrs. Rinenart tells an even better story, with even reater gayety, and even more intense umor. This incessant, spontaneous, irrapressible humor of hers may be taken as her distinctive contribution to detective ficion, the very essence of her true delightfulness. It has its source in an optimism s natural as the welling of water from the ock. It has the tonic quality of sunshine. even in the moments of their direct precaments the characters are able to laugh t themselves, and the reader laughs with

Now, one might reasonably suppose that his incorrigible comic perception would ake the edge off the excitement. But it doesn't. On the contrary, it adds to the serse of reality, makes the characters seem more natural, human and sympathetic, supplies ozone to the air of plausibility, gives a zest to the criminal chase and wheta the appetite for mystery.

And as for the mystery-the plot of "The Man in Lower Ten" so deeply engrosses quisitors, L. W. Panica of the Oma asserted that "they are making a great fuss other insistent distractions. We shan't give it away; we should not be so unkind to the prospective reader. But the starting Sunday the police had been notified when a point may at least be indicated. But they seem is murdered, and the man in "Lower Seven" finds, as he starts to dress, not his own clothes and shoes, but the garments of somebody else and the bag of somebody else, instead of the one con tining his own valuable papers. There's your puzzle for you, and it seems all the more baffling because of its very simplicity. The criminal must be one of ally, every reader becomes a detective on his own hook, certain-sure that he has the one correct solution.
