and make converts of them, through native workers, in 1910. There is such an enthus farm in Korea for the gospel of Jesus Christ that there is no other enthusiasm. in the world to compare with it except the American enthusiasm for base ball The ticket of admission for the new convert to the church in Korea is another soul brought to the living fount. The native converts raised last year out of their poverty $135,000 for the support of their churches. They will mortgage their own homes, and have done it repeatedly, to clear their churches of debt."

He told of the introduction of modern educational methods by the missionaries, working with the native authorities. "And out of 3,000 schools in the kingdom 1,400 are Christian schools, maintained by the Christian church."

Tells of Adams Massacre. John E. Merrill told the story of advancement in Turkey, and in between he gave realistic details of the massacres at Adana. He said the direct intervention of God himself seemed to have been the means of saving thousands of Christian lives. He traced the rise of the young Turkey party, the granting of a constitution and gloried in the freedom that has now come to the land.

"The great opportunity now open in Tur-key," said Mr. Merrill, "is in the hands of the American laymen. They can take it by prayer, advocacy and cash. There is : new spirit everywhere. The Adana massacre was the turning point. There are now 50,000 Protestant Christians in Turkey, who gave $177,000 last year for church work; and they do not lay down on us." Meanage from Africa.

The message from Africa was borne by Rev. A. F. Hensey, and he was a most eloquent and convincing messenger. He opened by the statement there are 15,000,000 people in Africa who have never been in touch with the gospel of Jesus Christ, and then showed the audience some African money, twists of brass wire resembling hairpins

"The first piece of this money he gets is put aside for the work of God by the convert, and they support many missions out of their pittance of 3 cents a day wages The first tenth of all their possessions goes to God.'

The African story was illustrated by many striking word pictures of surpassing consecration exhibited by native converts who have themselves become missionaries Dr. M. D. Eubank, a medical mission ary of long service in China, gave the dele gates many a thrill and brought plentiful smiles by his earnestness, his wit and his quaint philosophy, all shot through with the solidest kind of common sense. Indeed, the work of Dr. Eubank and his helpers is all based on that winning element.

"For years China was a seemingly hopeless field," said Dr. Eubank, and then he outlined the progress made by periods of years, until today there are 9,000 Christian workers scattered all over China. By means of Christian schools, hospitals, dispensaries, preaching, prayer and practical work a leaven of education and knowledge has been set at work that is having a tremendous influence on the life of the nation. Christian homes are being estab ished by native converts, and a spirit of emulation to learn, to know, to go ahead, is abroad among the Chinese people wher ever the missonaries have been able to be gin their work. "Today we have 65,000 Chinese boys and girls in our schools,' said Dr. Eubank, "and there is a door standing wide open, offering wonderful opportunity. The question is: 'Will you enter that door?" begun to break through the Chinese spirit Our Relation to the Problem.

Need of Education.

S. S. Hough of Dayton, O., mady an address on the need for education among church members on missionary topics and what the missionaries are doing. He outlined a course of study to interest, instruct and entail the aid of church members. Bishop W. S. Lewis of Foothow, China gave the convention an intensely interesting account of a recent trip of twenty days into the interior, where they found thousands in need of Gospel instruction and ready for it, but unable to get it. He pictured an occosion when 100 or more Chinese missionaries had volunteered to go out into the field and work without pay, and gave some historical facts to show that the leaven of Christianity has
