COMBINING AGAINST "JIM"

Hitchcock and Shallenberger Said to Be in Silent Partnership.

DAHLMAN FACTION UNSURPRISED

Mayor's Friends Declare They Have Calculated on This Move Long in Advance—Keeping Eye on Dan Gellius.

Apparently well founded rumor reaching Omaha is to the effect that the result of the recent Syracuse meeting of democrats is a tie-up of Congressman Hitchcock and Governor Shallenberger. As the story goes, the congressman-editor is to work quietly in Douglas county and throughout the Second congressional district to swing a fair portion of the democratic strength to the governor. In return, the governor will send forth the word through his appointees that Hitchcock is to have all the votes the Shallenberger men can throw to him, and both will oppose Bryan's county option scheme. Mayor Dahlman's friends do not appear to be worried in any great extent by the alleged tie-up; in fact, some men close to the mayor say they have discounted this move for some time. The Dahlman managers do not believe the Douglas county senatorial candidate will dare to fight the mayor openly in his home ball-wick. All they will attempt to guard against is the influence that Chief Game Warden Dan Gellius may be able to wield, backed by the Jacksonian element of the party.

Gellius will, it is understood, do the field work in this section, under the advice of Hitchcock, Berryman, Marshall and the few other Jacksonian leaders. In the past the state game warden has been with the Dahlman element, and it was through the backing of the mayor, Colonel Fanning, George Rogers and Tom Flynn, largely, that he was able to pull down the plum he got. Hence the Dahlman backers figure Mr. Gellius will not be able to turn many votes no matter what backing he may have. Mayor Dahlman insists that he has made no combination of any kind; that he is holding his own row, and expects to keep on doing so industriously. He does not say, however, that later on he will not consider such a thing if the necessity arises. Naturally, in that case, W. H. Thompson of Grand Island would be the most likely ally of the mayor of Omaha; but it seems certain that up to date no agreement has been reached between the two men. They are waiting the next move of the Hitchcock-Shallenberger forces.

MILDEST OF ALL MARCHES

Present Month Sets Up New Record for This Part of the Country.

The present month of March beats the record for mildness in this locality since the establishment of the weather observatory here in 1870. The record for high temperature for March was that established in 1907, for one day the thermometer registering 81 degrees. Prior to the present year, March, 1878, presented the highest monthly average of temperature, which was 43 degrees for the month, but this will be beaten by March, 1910, unless some very cold weather sets in during the last six days of the month, which is not at all probable.

Five Buildings in Friday's Fire List

One, a Lunch Counter, is Entirely Destroyed, the Others Only Partially.

The daily fire record for Omaha reached number five Friday afternoon. Nathan Pearlman's little lunch counter and Morris Cohn's little second-hand store were put out of business Friday morning by a fire. The fire broke out in the restaurant, 230 North Sixteenth street, and destroyed it. It was a tiny building and the total loss is estimated at $500, which is covered by insurance. Cohn's establishment is at 222 North Sixteenth street, and it was set ablaze by the restaurant fire and, Mr. Cohn says, damaged to the extent of $500, though not destroyed. Mr. Cohn had $500 insurance, however. Fire of unknown origin in the cupola over the elevator shaft in the building at Thirtieth and Leavenworth streets, occupied by the Booth Fisheries company, caused a $200 damage, Friday afternoon. There was no fish on the floor where the fire started, but a large quantity of stored on the lower floors. The management said that it is unable to give an estimate of the company's loss at this time. Sparks from an engine ignited the roof of a switch shanty on the tracks near Fifteenth and Mason street, while the Booth fire was in progress. A detachment of firemen put it out before any considerable damage was done. The fire department was called at noon to extinguish a tiny blaze at the city dump, Seventh and Lake streets.

WORK THE SLOW DRAG GAME

Two Colored Men Fit it Onto Youth of Their Race.

PLUCK THE BOY FOR SOME COIN

One Man Finds the Phony Pocketbook Bulging with Money and Between Them They Get $80 from the Lad.

Ralph Bates, a colored youth of 17 years, is a wisner boy than he was Thursday. He is also a fortunate lad. Thursday while he was standing at the corner of Sixteenth and Farnam streets another colored man picked up what appeared to be a plump pocketbook from the gutter. Bates saw him and the man slyly edged over to Ollie Sullivan, also colored, and the boy informed them that he would be glad to divide the contents of the pocketbook if they would not say anything about it. Sullivan agreed, as did Bates. When the contents were noted, the finder informed Bates that it contained a $100 bill. Sullivan had only $10 with him and the other man had but $5, so the big bill could not be split up unless change was obtained. Bates had but $2 on his person, so he was urged to get $80 to make change. The lad works for Myers-Dillon Drug company as errand boy. He has money in the bank, and when he went into the store and asked for $80 it was given to him. He turned the money over to the man who found the wallet and waited for a division of the spoils. Under some pretense the man made his escape. Bates became suspicious and reported the incident to Captain Savage at the police station. Detectives were sent out to Ollie Sullivan and when brought to the station was confronted with the boy's story. He denied being implicated in the deal except that he expected to share in the find. This did not sound good to Captain Savage, so he ordered Sullivan to dig up the boy's $80. Two plain clothes men were sent with Sullivan for the money. He obtained that amount and turned it over to Captain Savage. Friday morning in court Sullivan pleaded not guilty before Judge Crawford, but the court accepted the boy's evidence and sentenced Sullivan to ninety days in jail. The game that was worked is known in police and criminal circles as "slow-drag" and has been worked in Omaha before. Last winter two colored men successfully played the same game on a railroad porter at Union station.

No Pay, No Water for the Streets

Ultimatum of Frank Yates, Who Runs the Sprinklers at So Much Per Sprinkle.

"No pay, no sprinkling," is the ultimatum of the Omaha Street Sprinkling company. This declaration was made by Frank Yates, manager of the company, in a criticism of the protest that has been made against the dusty condition of the streets, which culminated in the miniature sandstorm of Wednesday. He disclaimed any responsibility for the present state of the streets and says that his company does not begin operations until April 1. The service is maintained until November 1. "But the public and the store keepers must understand," he said, "that we will only sprinkle before those places the owners of which pay for it. If there is a skip in a block the public will know why. "We are not in this business for our health. We are a private concern and we have to pay the Omaha Water company for our water. We think we render good service for what we charge and we sprinkle from three to four times a day."

MUST CO-OPERATE FOR CLEAN CITY, SAYS MAYOR DAHLMAN

Letter from Business Man Calls Down Fire of Reproach on Head of Kicker Himself.

Street Commissioner Flynn is in receipt of a communication from a prominent business man of Omaha which has caused some city officials to make caustic remarks. The letter relates that a dead dog has been lying in a certain place in the wholesale district for a month, to the writer's personal knowledge, and his clerks tell him it has been there much longer. The statement is made the firm has been waiting with some curiosity to see just how long the dead canine would be permitted to remain where it died or was thrown. Commissioner Flynn showed the letter to Mayor Dahlman as a sample, he said, of the aid given to beautify Omaha by helping to clean up. "Of course, the letter should have gone to the health commissioner," said the mayor, "but that's a mere detail. How would the health commissioner or any other officer of the city government ever be able to do anything in the way of cleaning up if everybody were to pursue the course adopted by this business man? In order to have dead animals removed reports has to be made to the health office, when orders are issued to the man charged with the duty of hauling away dead animals to get busy. There is only one man at work on that end of the health commissioner's department, and he is not able to go out and hunt through every street and alley, or under sidewalks, for dead animals. "We would have a nice condition, indeed, if very many people adopted the plan of waiting until the dead animal gathers some around to see whether or not they had anything to be taken away. I have advised the proper city officials to call the business man's attention to his duty in the premises. The responsible parties equally on all to help in keeping Omaha clean."

UMSTEAD IS DISCHARGED

Manager of Western Union Cleared of Child Labor Prosecution Following Plea of Guilty.

William W. Umstead, local manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, pleaded guilty in police court to employing a child under 16 years of age after 8 o'clock in the evening. He said the boy, whose name is Willis Martin, worked one night, but that he was unaware of the fact. He explained that he had given strict orders that boys under the age limit should not be allowed to work after the hour designated in the child labor law, but that it was possible that occasionally they did. The complaint was made by State Labor Commissioner W. A. Mahdin, who appeared against Mr. Umstead. After listening to Mr. Umstead's statement that he was unaware of the fact that the lad had worked and upon his promise to see that the law was carried out to the letter in the future, Judge Crawford dismissed the case. A Viper in the Stomach is dyspepsia complicated with liver and kidney troubles. Electric Bitters help all such cases or no pay. 50c. For sale by Beaton Drug Co.
